ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Australia—(U.P.)— A small force of Australians defeated almost 1,000 Japanese in a 72-hour battle for Mount Tambu within sight of the New Guinea base of Salamaua, inflicting almost 50 per cent casualties on the enemy, an official report said today.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Army fighter-bombers, pounding Kiska island with pre-invasion thoroughness, made 10 more raids on Japanese installations, the navy reported today, and this series of attacks was followed up Sunday night by an unusual single plane assault

At the same time Secretary Knox reported a flight of Liberator heavy bombers raided Wake island, and pounded that Japanese base "promiscuously and generally."

The lone night bomber which raided Kiska was a navy Catalina patrol craft, which made probably the first night assault ever delivered against the North Pacific outpost. The Catalina's bombs dropped in sleep-dispelling succession on Gertrude cove and the main camp section. Fires were started at Gertrude cove.

The 10 raids Sunday and the one shortly after midnight raised to 41 the total of air attacks on Kiska so far this month Saturday also had been a 10-raid day. The 20 attacks Saturday and Sunday were made by Curtiss Warhawk fighters equipped with bombs. The navy offered no ex-

Tells Italy to Surrender or Be Devastated

Knox Sees Quick Attempt To Get Axis Partner Out Of War.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Secretary of Navy Frank Knox said today he believed that an attempt would be made by the new Italian government to take Italy out of the war "in the reasonably near future."

Knox, at a press conference, emphasized that he had no information on the situation in Italy other than that in newspapers.

"I estimate that the appearance of things indicates probably some attempt at taking Italy out of the war," he said.

"Do you mean some attempt by the king and Marshall Badoglio?" Knox was asked.

"Yes."

Asked when he thought such moves would be made, Knox said he didn't know but added, "I think it will come in the reasonably near future."

Knox inferred that plans already are being made for the use of bases in Italy for an Allied advance across the Adriatic to the "side door" of the Balkans.

Asked if there were Italian bases that could be used if Italy were to come under Allied domination, he replied affirmatively, adding.

"There are bases there for an advance across the Adriatic and for air attacks on southern Germany."

Knox estimated that the Germans had five or six divisions of troops in Italy and Sicily, but he emphasized that this was "purely guesswork" on his part.

He said in reply to a question that he knew of no evidence of "internal cracking" in Germany. Asked for his definition of "unconditional surrender" — the terms agreed upon by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill at Casablanca for restoring peace—

Badoglio Regime Makes No Offer Of Peace Says British Chief.

BULLETIN

LONDON — (U.P.) — The diplomatic correspondent of the British Press association, sometimes regarded as close to the foreign office, said today that "it would cause no surprise" if the first official peace overture from Italy were put out within the next 48 hours through Switzerland.

STOCKHOLM — (U.P.) — The newspaper Allehanda in a dispatch from Berne said today that the Nazi Gestapo had begun leaving Italy on orders of Premier Pietro Badoglio.

(By United Press)

LONDON—Prime Minister Churchill warned Italy today that she will be invaded and "seared, scarred and blackened from one end to the other" unless she surrenders unconditionally immediately.

The Allies have received no peace approaches from the new Italian government, he told commons in a fiery speech, and therefore no decisions are called for by the Allied governments except to bring "the maximum avalanche of fire and steel on all targets of military significance throughout the length and breadth of the land."

"From the north and the south, from the land and from the air, and by amphibious descents, we shall endeavor to put the utmost rigors of war increasingly upon them," he said. "Orders to this effect have been given all Allied commanders concerned."

Churchill acknowledged that it might take the new Italian government under Marshal Pietro Badoglio some time to make up its mind on withdrawing from the war and said it would be the Al-

'BACK ATTACK'

FDR Sets Date For Third War Loan Campaign.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— President Roosevelt today formally proclaimed Sept. 9 for the start of a third war loan campaign and asked every American to "back the attack" with war bond purchases according to "his conscience."

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau has set a goal of $15,000,000,000 for the drive and Mr. Roosevelt asserted that "in carrying the war into enemy territory, we shall need greater amounts of money than any nation has ever asked from its citizens in all history."

"As commander-in-chief," he said in his proclamation, "I hereby invoke every citizen to give all possible aid and support to this third war loan drive, not only so that our financial goal may be reached, but to encourage and inspire those of our husbands and fathers and sons who are under fire on a dozen fronts all over the world."

Firm Leases 10,000 Acres Of Ohio Land.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—(U.P.) — Ten thousand acres of land in Springfield and Beaver townships have been leased in an effort to find additional supplies of natural gas under the southern part of Mahoning county, J. J. Schmidt, field superintendent of the East Ohio Gas company, announced today.

The company already is drilling the first deep well in Springfield township near New Springfield, Schmidt said.

YEP, THERE'S NO CHANGE ON R-30

It's Still Closed But There's Still Hope That 'Early In Week' Will Arrive.

A prediction last week that the new U. S. Route 30-N grade elimination project west of Mansfield would be open to through traffic early this week had failed to produce results today with the major route still closed to motorists except those who live along the project. The job originally was scheduled for completion last Nov. 30.

Persons who live along the section of highway between the B. and O. and Erie tracks west of the city have been driving over the highway for a week, but the detour signs are still up for motorists who want to drive from Mansfield to Crestline, or into Mansfield from the other end of the project.

Asked when the new grade elimination job will be ready for heavy travel, Vance Grimes, Ashland division state highway en-

DRILL TONIGHT

Defense Workers To 'Rescue' Fire 'Victims.'

Civilian defense workers and auxiliary firemen will demonstrate tonight how they would rescue victims trapped in a building set afire by incendiary bombs dropped in an enemy raid.

A public demonstration scheduled for last week will be staged at 9:30 p. m. today at 130 North Walnut street where a garage room will be filled with smoke and three "victims" will be carried out by "rescuers." The first aid crew from a downtown air raid post will "revive" the trio of "victims."

Wardens and firemen in the downtown Zone 14 will participate in the mobilization test, said Ray Ward, chief air raid warden in the downtown area.

Contractors Apply For First Of City's 70 New Home Units

Mansfield building contractors have wasted no time in applying for permits to construct new homes under the city's federal war housing project, but builders and property owners have shown little interest in conversion and remodeling work, the Chamber of Commerce revealed today.

Contractors already have requested priorities for materials for nearly a dozen new homes, it was said. Only a few inquiries have been received concerning the conversion of present living units into larger ones, however, according to John G. Routzon, secretary-manager of the Chamber of Commerce.

The city was allocated 70 new home units and 140 conversion units under the Federal Housing administration's plan to provide more adequate living quarters for war workers in the Mansfield area.

Most of the applications for new homes indicate they will be built on Taylor road and Green street, both in recently built-up sections, it was said.

Because of the lagging interest in remodeling jobs, Routzon said the Chamber of Commerce is considering asking the government agency to allocate more new units and fewer conversion projects to Mansfield.

Prospective builders must mail their applications to the FHA offices in Cleveland which will approve the request or return the blanks for revision. The builder is required to list the number of pounds of critical materials his project will require so that priorities can be issued for them.

Galion Flier On Hamburg Raid Had Double Task To Perform

There's more than meets the eye to the report from London today that Lieut Howard Ness took part in the U. S. Army Air Force's second daylight air raid over Hamburg and northern Germany yesterday.

What the report says nothing about is the fact that probably a couple of those bombs Lieut Ness dropped on the Germans were for his brother, Hugh killed in an army transport plane crash near Springfield, Colo., last January.

At least that's what his mother, Mrs. Curt Ness, feels sure he must have done.

"When Hugh was killed last January, Howard said he would have to fight harder than ever to do Hugh's job, too. He and his crew left for foreign duty in a bomber named 'Max' which was Hugh's nickname," Mrs. Ness said today when she heard of her son's participation in the successful raid.

And on the other side of the Atlantic, her son, co-pilot of the Flying Fortress, "Thumper Again" agreed wholeheartedly with the three other Ohioans who were in the raid that it was one of their most successful attacks

"I'm sure we knocked out one whole group of warehouses," he was quoted as saying in an Associated Press dispatch from London.

Mrs Ness reported that the

Lagging Interest Delays Nursery School Opening

Opening of nursery schools for the children of Mansfield war workers has been postponed until September, or until enough registrations are turned in to warrant the expenditure of funds for the project, it was announced today from the office of Supt. of Schools W. L. Miller.

A disappointing registration has brought response from only 15 parents who indicated they would like to place their children in the day nurseries. The superintendent's office has received no registrations since last Friday.

The nursery plan was set up on the basis of at least 20 children per unit. First of the schools had been expected to open yesterday if enough registrations had been received

Designed to afford care for children from two to six years old during this day, the project has been approved by the federal government which recently allocated $19,000 to supplement local funds to finance the nursery units.

DUG UP

Wallace's Political Future Exhumed By Sen. Guffey.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The political future of Henry Agard Wallace, Iowa farmer and magazine editor who became vice president, was dug up today for a post-mortem—a short time after some capital speculation had laid it peacefully to rest.

Spearheading the spadework was Senator Joe Guffey, Pennsylvania Democrat who called the presidential turn far ahead of the pack three times in a row. Said Guffey, long tagged an administration wheelhorse:

"I have no hesitancy whatever in saying that I'm for Roosevelt and Wallace as a Democratic ticket in 1944."

Guffey's statement to an interviewer yesterday was the first public congressional suggestion for Wallace to seek a second term.

FALL: Travelers Say Ex-Duce Ousted For Stand On Defense

(By Associated Press)

MADRID—Travelers arriving by plane from Rome today declared Benito Mussolini fell because he supported a German plan to abandon central and southern Italy for a strong defense line in the north, and that he now is at a villa between Rome and Ostia.

The new government of Marshal Pietro Badoglio insists all of Italy must be defended if Italy is to remain in the war, and the Germans have been forced to agree, they declared.

Hitler first proposed a strong stand behind the Po valley, and Mussolini seeking to do his bidding, was overruled by the Fascist grand council by a vote of 19 to 6, it was asserted.

Carlo Scorza, Fascist party secretary, was reported under preventive arrest, with others of il duce's collaborators confined to their homes

On the issue of defense of all Italy, Badoglio for the moment at least has the support of the army and the crown, both of which enjoy tremendous popular prestige as successors to Mussolini, this late-hour account in Rome said.

The first clear report of what happened after Mussolini resigned came with the first Ala Litoria plane to leave Rome since the event.

Some of these travelers were Italian. From them were obtained this account of Mussolini's fall:

When il duce returned to Rome from his Verona meeting with Hitler, he called in his immediate party aides and told them that Hitler considered southern and central Italy undefendable with Sicily in Allied hands.

He said German plans called for a stand behind the Po valley, and suggested evacuation not only of Italian arms and munitions and troops behind this line, but all possible rolling stock, food stores and harvests so that the Allies

FUTILE: Nazi Counter-Blows Fail, Allies Advance In Sicily

(By Associated Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—American and Canadian troops, throwing themselves forward in the northeastern area of Sicily, have cut to pieces savage German counter-attacks in the central sector and and advanced over ground strewn with Axis dead, Allied headquarters announced today.

At the same time a headquarters communique announced that Allied air forces had smashed a new enemy attempt to bring reinforcements on a large scale into Sicily by shooting down 21 huge German Junkers-52 transports in a battle over Messina strait.

Two giant German 323-Mersebergs were shot down by RAF Beaufighters. These planes are capable of carrying more than 100 men, but official reports did not state whether they were filled with troops.

It was stated officially that German troops now have been identified all along the entire front in northeastern Sicily where they are attempting to build a dike across the tip of the island to block the invasion gates to Italy.

Enemy losses skyrocketed in the central and southern portions of the line and a number of German battalions lost half of their effective strength in attempts to batter back the relentless forward rush of the Allied troops who swept in a wheeling movement from central Sicily.

The Canadians bore the brunt of the operation and made gains against the heaviest opposition, and the Allied communique said the American advance, too, was

MAIL RUSHED TO SOLDIERS

Ohioan With Armed Forces Tells How It's Done In Pacific Area.

(By International News Service)

SOMEWHERE IN AUSTRALIA—According to those who should know, First Lieut. W. E. Slessor of Lima, Ohio, is one of the busiest men in the Southwest Pacific area today.

He is Postal Officer in charge of all incoming and outgoing mail for every military unit in this area a pretty large order, since in this case the word "area" covers a sizeable slice of Australian territory.

In effect, he is one of Uncle Sam's postmasters in uniform. But the term postmaster is a bit ineffectual when applied to Lieutenant Slessor; it is a postmaster's job to know the address of every person in his town and to see that changes of address are duly recorded upon receipt.

In Uncle Sam's army post office, however, the addresses are in a constant state of flux. A thousand men of every rank are here today; tomorrow they may be off to another area. It is only a part of Slessor's job to know when they go, and where.

Slessor's yearly business in stamps is great enough to put his establishment up in the ranks as a first class postoffice. His experience in the Postoffice Railway Mail Service before the war made him competent to handle the staff of men who work under him; he probably supervises the handling of more mail in a month than goes through his home town postoffice.

Not least among the worries connected with his job is that of caring for lost and broken parcels. In fact, his private office looks like the "dead letter" department of a postoffice during the Christmas rush.

Packages arrive with labels missing, incorrect addresses, or broken up entirely, a hodge-podge of stale cake, cigarettes, shaving mugs and framed photographs of the girl-friend.

If the addresses cannot be located every effort is made to return the parcel to the sender, if it is of value. Things like cigarets, razor blades, books and candy, however, are distributed through the proper organizations to those who need them most.

Lieutenant Slessor and his staff have probably earned more gratitude than any other single group acting as go-between for U. S. servicemen and their families. For upon them depends the smooth and regular dispatch to far-flung battle areas, of those precious links with home.

WARTIME VACATION
FOR BATSON'S EMPLOYEES!
To give employees their usual vacation with pay it is necessary that we
CLOSE OUR STORE
For One Week—From Mon., Aug. 2
Until Monday, August 9th
Because of a shortage of manpower throughout our store it will be necessary for us to close for one week so that each employee can enjoy a much needed vacation. Should we try to operate our store with a limited force during the vacation season we are afraid that the usual service that can be expected of Batson's would not be satisfactory. We therefore have decided upon the above mentioned means to give our employees their regular summer vacations with pay.

ALL PAYMENTS DUE DURING THIS PERIOD CAN BE MADE AT THE STORE THIS OR THE FOLLOWING WEEK. LAY-A-WAYS WILL BE DELIVERED THIS WEEK PROVIDING WE ARE NOTIFIED.

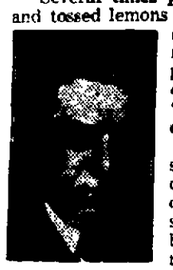
IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

PALERMO, Sicily--(By Wireless)—The Allied occupation of Palermo, the capital city of Sicily, was evidently a welcome relief for the population. I drove in here a few hours after the city had surrendered to the Americans and found a most friendly reception along the way.

Several times people ran up to our automobile and tossed lemons in. They cheered us, and often called out "Hello" or "Good morning." One man, who was proud that he knew a few words of English, waved and shouted "Good night" although it was early afternoon.



Clapper

Many times I have read with skepticism accounts of how a conquered population cheered occupying troops. They never seemed to ring true to me. If I had not seen this myself I would not have believed it. Therefore you may have your doubts and may feel that I am laying it on. Perhaps the Italians that I saw were not sincere. All I know is what I saw and heard. The reaction of the crowds along the roads was, I should say, a mild version of a minor political candidate's reception on a campaign tour in the United States. About like some of the Landon campaign parades, for instance; better than some I saw for Hoover during the depression.

Maybe the fact that Americans toss out cigarets as they drive through the villages encourages friendly reception. If so these people learn very fast, indeed, because they were out cheering, even small children holding up their fingers in a victory "V" bright and early the morning after the Americans came in to occupy the city.

The military side of this operation is another story which I know little about. General Patton is naturally proud of the speed with which the Americans cut across the island. He says it may be the fastest movement of such a large volume of troops and equipment over a difficult terrain in the war. Patton said it outdoes the Germans' early blitz. We followed over the same road part of the way and it was extremely hilly and winding.

As a matter of fact it has been a parade except for some relatively small clashes in which the American soldiers' equipment easily proved best. The Germans handled most of the enemy artillery units, the Italians the remainder.

The Germans tried to slug it out once or twice but were smashed down.

Aside from that it seems to me that this is a case of a people being sick of war, certainly weary of our air attack, which has again proved devastating in Palermo. I have been around the city and some sections are a shambles. It must have been with great relief that the people saw the Americans come in and knew there would be no more bombing. Actually General Patton gave the order some time before the surrender to lay off of further bombing so as not to cause unnecessary suffering.

The first one to call on General Patton at Palermo was the bishop representing the cardinal. Incidentally, the general is a Roman Catholic. The bishop asked Patton if there would be any interference with the church and Patton said not. He told the bishop that one of our fundamental rules is freedom of religion. He asked the bishop to tell the people their soldiers had fought magnificently but to urge them to spread the word that further fighting would be a waste of blood because if they did not stop fighting they would be killed.

This trip into Palermo, just about 12 hours behind the surrender, has been a revelation to me about conquered territory. I drove for miles from the time I left the airborne division without seeing Allied sentries. There would often be groups of Italian soldiers disarmed but without guard. I saw them waiting in groups to be called for transfer to camps.

The countryside was scarcely touched. There was almost no evidence of war along the route except as we neared the city. At the scene of the final encounters there were some enemy dead piled up beside disabled guns and armored vehicles. The only real marks of war are the bomb wreckage here in Palermo, which will take a long time to replace, again showing how impossible it is for any country to continue fighting after losing control of the air.

MILK RATION PLANS PREPARED --JUST IN CASE

OPA Maps Local Restriction Programs, Hopes It Won't Have To Use Them.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Plans for local rationing of milk were being prepared by the Office of Price Administration today "just in case," but the War Food Administration hoped to avoid such action by other means of adjusting consumption to demand.

This was learned in the wake of an agricultural department report on the dairy situation which criticized OPA's price policies on milk and forecasted reduced production and local shortages next fall.

The major reasons for the expected drop in production, according to the department's bureau of agricultural economics, is "constant instead of seasonally adjusted price ceilings, which tend to stimulate production during the spring and summer but retard it in the fall and early winter."

Other factors:

The possible scarcity of feed grain; the reduced supply of high protein foods per animal unit.

The report did not mention either the OPA or the WFA by name but said that "unless price ceilings are increased" it will be less profitable for farmers to produce milk than either a year ago or the long-time average.

Both the WFA and the OPA are trying to formulate plans for distribution of a fluid milk supply which the bureau of agricultural economics said probably would be at least 12 per cent below military and civilian demands.

WFA officials believe a "freeze" of retail deliveries at the level of some recent month might do it.

The OPA proposal, which looks eventually to local milk rationing, would call first for a reduction in the manufacture of dairy products such as ice cream, cheese, butter and cream in any area where a shortage appears likely. The reduction could be extended to other nearby areas, if necessary.

SWAP BLAME IN MATERNITY AID PLAN FAILURE

Ohio Officials Each Say the Other Caused State To Lose Benefits.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The health director of the federal children's bureau and the Ohio health director each blamed the other today for failure of Ohio to adopt a federal plan for maternity aid to wives of men in the service.

Dr. E. F. Dailey of the children's bureau blamed Dr. R. H. Markwith, Ohio health director, for the fact that Ohio was the only state thus far to turn down the federal aid afforded by congress. Thirty-nine states have adopted federal aid, he said, while eight others have not yet submitted plans for cooperation.

In Columbus, Dr. Markwith said that "Ohio submitted a plan in good faith—a plan approved by Dailey's own representative—and it would have been in effect here in May except for Dailey's refusal to accept it."

"I don't see why Ohio has been singled out, when eight other states, including Pennsylvania and Texas, have not even seen fit to offer a plan," Markwith said.

"It appears to us," Dailey said, "that it is unfair to the wives of Ohio's soldiers to deny them the provision for care which congress authorized.

"As far as we can judge from this end, Markwith is the man responsible.

The children's bureau objected to the Ohio plan submitted May 6, Dailey said, and the plan was returned for amendments but he had not heard further from Markwith.

Markwith said he had taken the case directly to Kathryn Lenroot, head of the children's bureau, and that Dailey "apparently hasn't read her mail."

"Dailey hasn't anyone to blame but himself," Markwith said. "He refused to approve a plan worked out by Dr. John M. Saunders, his own representative who met with representatives of the Ohio Medical association, the State Hospital association and the health department."

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK—I feel that I have profited by my little refresher course in the case of Dr. William A. Wirt, the Gary, Ind., schoolmaster, who got the works from a loaded New Deal committee of the house of representatives, back in 1934. Doctor Wirt wrote a manifold letter to a lot of Republicans in which he reported that a number of New Dealers, in the course of some general conversation after a dinner party, had said that President Roosevelt was to be the Kerensky of an American revolution who would later give way to a Stalin.

Pegler

Now none of them may have said just that and Dr. Wirt may have been a bad reporter who gave general impressions as accurate information but my review convinces me that the three New Deal congressmen who constituted the majority of the committee did not get at the truth of the case and did not want to. It is my conviction, based on much experience, that those other persons at the dinner party, five of them government bureaucrats and all of them underlings could not have been telling the truth when they told the committee that, whatever they might have liked to say that night, they were unable to say anything because Wirt took the floor in a harangue on the subject of money and they were unable to break through his service at any time.

That story is too thin for belief because anyone who has had any social experience with New Dealers will admit that not even Herbert Bayard Swope, himself, could put on much of a rally, much less hold the floor all evening against a roomful of them, even a roomful of the scrub. Mr. Swope would be my man today in almost any contest for I have heard him stand down a whole round table, but I would not back him against those who were present at that dinner party for more than a sprint of one minute and I would want plenty of odds, even so. Against one or more of the New Deal 'varsity I would not even pay the entry fee for that would be just throwing money away.

And, after all, who was Dr. Wirt? If he was so hot he surely would have been heard from before the dinner party at which he is supposed to have turned in the performance of a world champion and in the years that remained to him he would have won further recognition in fast company. But the truth is that he didn't even have a metropolitan rating much less a national reputation and he never entered even the 5 o'clock trials at the National Press club.

Every congressman knows that it takes superb speed and endurance to out-talk and over-talk any gathering of New Dealers, with or without stimulants and that the man or woman who can do so for an entire evening hasn't yet been born.

My man Herbert Swope, I am sure, would be the first to admit that such a contest would be an over-match and Mr. Swope has never been accused of flinching for he talked his way through the peace conference in Versailles and once won a spectacular victory over David Lloyd George and Georges Clemenceau who took him literally when he said he represented the world. He meant the New York World. His famous match with Isaac F. Marcosson was really no contest, which may give you an idea. Mr. Marcosson got in only a few feeble "yes, buts" and "may I interrupts" and was helped away by his handlers in 30 minutes muttering "we was robbed."

If Fielding H "Hurry Up" Yost were still in his prime, of course I would have to rate him above my man Herbert but age takes its toll and it was sad to see him murdered a few years ago at a football coaches' meeting by Robert Zuppke, a good man, to be sure, but second string, after all. But when Mr. Yost was good he was marvelous and I believe that, although he beat my man Swope one night long ago, Mr. Swope learned lessons from that defeat which have contributed to his enduring greatness. That night, at Grantland Rice's house, Mr. Yost was talking and acting out football plays and Mr. Swope, just a brash and impetuous novice at the time, tried to challenge him. It was a slaughter for Mr. Yost talked right through him for three hours. Finally, conceding defeat, my man Herbert got his hat and was starting home and then, as a last crushing blow, Mr. Yost exclaimed "This Eckersall used to kick off the side of his foot, like this" and seizing my man, Herbert's hat, booted it out the 11th floor window into Fifth avenue.

But New Dealers are special. My man is game and has plenty of class and endurance but I don't want to get him murdered.

Hitler Sets Up Super-Gestapo Because He Fears Revolt.

LONDON — (INS) — Hitler has formed a new "super Gestapo" apparently because he fears a revolt against himself and the Nazi leadership in the German army, an Istanbul dispatch to Reuters said today.

Reports reaching the Turkish frontier said that the newly-constituted high police organization has authority over German army officers.

Relations between the new Gestapo and German army officers was reported extremely tense and many fights were said to have occurred.

1 IN 5 FAIL TO SLASH PRICES

OPA Files Injunction Against Slaughterers Following 5-State Investigation.

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND — One of every five slaughterers and meat distributors checked in a recent office of price administration investigation had failed to roll back their prices in accordance with government specifications, the regional OPA announced today.

James C. Gruener OPA attorney, said more than 20 per cent of nearly 1,000 slaughterers and distributors investigated had violated the rollback order.

The check covered 12 OPA districts in the five-state region of Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, West Virginia and Kentucky. These districts have headquarters in Toledo, Cleveland, Dayton, Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, South Bend, Lexington, Charleston, Iron Mountain, Grand Rapids and Detroit.

Of 958 slaughterers and distributors investigated, 202 failed to roll back meat prices and were charging above ceilings; 184 failed to meet sanitation specifications; 256 failed to grade meat properly; 259 failed to register as required by OPA, and 191 failed to keep proper records, Gruener reported.

The OPA reported 17 injunction proceedings, one suspension hearing and one treble damage suit brought in the Toledo district, 50 suspension proceedings filed and 37 warnings sent out in the Cleveland district, 28 Columbus district violators reported to the food distribution administration, and in Cincinnati seven injunction or suspension.

BOY, 11, HURT

Foot Injured When Bike Hits Tractor-Trailer.

August Eilenfield, jr., 11, of 151 West Sixth street, suffered injuries to his right foot and leg and body abrasions at 4:30 p. m. Monday when he rode his bicycle into the side of a tractor-trailer on North Diamond street.

The youth, son of City Fireman August Eilenfield, told police the brakes on his bicycle were faulty and he rode off the sidewalk near East Fourth street into the trailer. One wheel ran over the bicycle. The boy was taken to General hospital.

Up and Down THE STREET

Mrs. Carolyn Loose wondered if her eyes were deceiving her when she saw a white robin in the yard of the Frank Bissman home, 611 Bigelow road, where she is employed. It has been around the yard now for about two weeks. Mrs. Loose wrote to Edward Thomas, a biologist at Ohio State university, asking about the robin. He replied that in all his years of teaching and study, he had never seen an albino robin.

It makes you feel as though you were right there in the front lines fighting with the boys when you have a bomber named for you. Just ask Catherine Lannerd, 159 Vennum avenue, about it. Last week she got a letter from Joe Collins, former Mansfielder and a childhood chum of hers, that he had named his bomber "Cathy" in honor of her. It seems that Joe as chief of the crew was given the privilege of naming the bomber and chose "Cathy" for his Mansfield friend. Miss Lannerd is a sophomore at Miami University.

Two partly-eaten doughnuts gave Mansfield police a clue today in the theft of clothing and jewelry valued at $185 from an Akron man's automobile Monday noon on Park avenue west. F. E. Skelly, Akron, said he parked his car near the Madison theater and when he returned from lunch about a half hour later, the car door had been broken open and his personal property was missing. Finding the doughnuts on the front seat of the car, police learned that a colored boy about 15 had purchased doughnuts shortly before at a nearby bakery shortly before the theft was reported. Police are searching for the boy now.

STRIKE MEETING CALLED

CLEVELAND —(U.P.)— The regional war labor board today ordered striking employes of the Andrews Steel company of Newport, Ky., to attend a divisional hearing at Newport tomorrow to show cause why a strike of 480 members of the United Steel Workers union (CIO) should be continued.

SEEK WORKERS FOR CANNERIES

Ohio Defense Council Says 16,404 Needed To Avert Loss of Crops.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — The Ohio state council of defense today began a campaign to recruit volunteers for work in canneries during August and September so Ohioans might be insured an adequate supply of preserved foodstuffs this winter.

The 65 local defense councils in the 30 counties containing canneries will solicit promises of at least part-time aid from housewives and office workers.

In asking for workers in advance of the peak canning season, civilian defense officials hope to obtain sufficient enlistment to avert a repetition of last year's tomato crop disaster in which tons of the red fruit rotted at the canneries for lack of labor to preserve them.

Stone estimated at least 80 canneries would be in operation by the last of August in the following counties: Ashtabula, Logan, Wood, Williams, Mercer Pickaway, Franklin, Defiance, Lorain, Seneca, Sandusky, Drake, Warren, Allen, Madison, Butler, Huron, Putnam, Ottawa, Erie, Shelby, Clark, Lucas, Miami, Van Wert, Augalize, Fayette, Fulton, Clinton and Greene.

"Ohio canneries will require approximately 16,404 workers," Stone declared. "With the manpower situation as it is, a large portion of the workers must be volunteers."

He added the state highway department would furnish trucks to haul the crops to the canneries.

FUNERAL WAITS WORD FROM SON

Mrs. Stella Black Taken by Death In Columbus.

MT. GILEAD — Funeral services for Mrs. Stella Marie Black, 44, who died Sunday at Columbus state hospital, remained incomplete today, pending word from a son in the army.

Mrs. Black was born Dec. 18, 1898 near Johnsville. She is survived by her husband, Albert Black, of near Mt. Gilead; two sons, Pvt. High A. Black, with the U. S. Army at Camp Hahn, Cal., and Charles P. Black, Washington, D. C.; six brothers, Robert Wirick, Mt. Gilead; Burr Wirick, Bellville, Lester, Donald and Gerald Wirick, all of Galion, and Earl Wirick, Johnsville; four sisters, Mrs. Reese Rush, Mt. Gilead; Mrs. Mary Rinehart, Lexington; Mrs. Clarence Zeger, California, and Mrs. Dorothy Shook, Galion.

ONIONS COSTLY

He Stole Them, But Pays $50 and Costs.

ELYRIA — (U.P.) — The price of vegetables is going up in Elyria—if you take them from a neighbor's victory garden.

Mayor Joseph Q. Petro fined Herman Burr, of Elyria, $50 and costs on a disorderly conduct charge yesterday after Burr admitted taking onions from a victory garden.

EARNS THREE MILLIONS

MIDDLETOWN — (AP) — The American Rolling Mill company reported today provisions of $3,229,696 for the six months ended June 30 after provisions for estimated federal income and excess profits taxes of $8,219,023 and $500,000 to the contingent reserve.

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

(Note: Tall, blond and 21, Alexis Smith has graduated from "pin-up girl" to full stardom. Here she contends that Cinematown isn't as it sometimes seems.)

Alexis Smith Says—

HOLLYWOOD screwy? I don't think so. Everybody who comes here is looking for the unusual. As one who lived here as a little girl and went to the public schools I'd like to list some of the normalcies, which must now come as surprises.

Humphrey Bogart was on his way to the studio the other morning. He picked up a soldier hitchhiker.

"You look an awful lot like Humphrey Bogart," the soldier said.

"Reasonable enough," replied Bogey. "I am Bogart."

The soldier pondered a minute.

"Sorry, mister," he commented. "But I don't believe it."

Bogey was intrigued. "Why not?" he asked.

"Bogart wouldn't ride in a car like this," he said.

Bogey's car was a perfectly good flivver coupe.

But that's typical. Outsiders don't realize that normal things are the rule rather than the exception.

When I got home in the evening after signing my contract with Warners' several years ago, mother said.

"I'm so sorry that you're going to have to change your name. I always thought Alexis Smith fitted you."

"But I'm not going to change my name, mother," I said.

"Oh, yes you are," she replied. "They'll never let you keep Smith. It's too commonplace."

I went into a 20-minute worry over that, because I like my name, too.

But that was one time when mother didn't know best. When I arrived at the studio the next morning, I was all ready to be mildly defiant, my contract being safely signed.

"I don't see why I should change my name," I asserted. "I think Alexis Smith fits me."

The boss stroked his chin thoughtfully.

"I think so too," he said. And that was that.

* * *

Then consider this matter of glamor. There are plenty of people who have their feet on the ground. One of the first to teach me that was Charles Boyer. We were making "The Constant Nymph" when a woman I recognized from pictures in a smart magazine as a member of the international social set, was ushered in.

She was introduced to Boyer, and although she tried to hide it under her smooth sophistication, it was easy to see that she was tremendously impressed.

She rattled on about Cannes, Biarritz, Monte Carlo, Paris, dropping in at frequent intervals references to the Princess So-and-So and this and that marquis or duchess.

Charlie nodded politely, but he didn't have much to say.

But she had no intention of letting the conversation die. This Frenchman certainly would be interested in her important continental friends if she mentioned only a few more. She did and then added:

"Surely, Mr. Boyer, you must miss those charming people over here."

"No, I can't say that I do," he answered in that slow deliberate way of his. "I have never had the pleasure of meeting any of your friends."

"Surely you know some of them," she went on. "Everyone in Paris has—"

"I am afraid not," he interposed. "You see, madame, I am a French peasant."

DOROTHY MAE KLOHS WEDS IN CLEVELAND

Nuptial Ceremony Takes Place In St. Christopher's-By-the-River Church; Couple Will Make Home In Pensacola, Fla.

WORD has been received here of the lovely wedding of Miss Dorothy Mae Klohs, daughter of Mrs. Frank Klohs, 136 Parkwood boulevard, to Ensign Donald F. Sturm, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Sturm, 185 Euclid avenue in Willoughby. The ceremony took place in the St. Christopher's-By-the-River church in Cleveland, July 17, at 5:30 p. m. Officiating pastor was Rev. Trickett, pastor of the Lakewood Episcopal church.

Palms, ferns and beauty baskets of white garden flowers decorated the church. An organ recital preceded the ceremony, during which Miss Betty Lou Heltzman sang "O Perfect Love."

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Frank R. Klohs. She was attired in a long sleeved gown of white marquisette, fashioned on princess lines. White velvet bows held in place her fingertip veil of illusion.

A white prayer book decorated with a white orchid and streamers of white satin ribbon was carried by the bride. She wore a double strand of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom.

Maid of honor, Miss Ethel Heuse, wore a pink marquisette gown with black velvet accessories. Her flowers were pink rosebuds with blue delphinium.

Mrs. J. H. Roodhuyzen, a classmate of the bride at Ohio university, was matron of honor. She was gowned in yellow marquisette with blue accessories and carried Sunburst roses and blue delphinium.

Jack Stafford of Willoughby served as best man for the bridegroom. Ushers were Jack Robison, brother-in-law of Ensign Sturm, and Lambert Ringhaver of Lakewood.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Klohs wore a floor length gown of white lace and a corsage of pink rosebuds. The bridegroom's mother chose a white jersey floor length gown. Her corsage was of yellow rosebuds.

A reception for 50 guests followed the wedding at the Sturm home. The house was beautifully decorated with bouquets of white gladioli and lighted tapers. White gladioli and lighted tapers also decorated the buffet table which was centered with a large wedding cake.

The traveling costume of the bride was a pink linen two-piece suit with which she wore matching accessories. The couple plan to make their home in Pensacola, Fla.

The new Mrs. Sturm is a graduate of Ohio university and has been a teacher at Union high school. She is a member of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority and the Woman's University club.

Ensign Sturm also attended Ohio university. He enlisted in the Navy Air Corps in September, 1942, and received his wings July 13. He is now an instructor at the Pensacola air base in Pensacola.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were the bridegroom's grandmother, Mrs. Louise Johnson; his aunt, Mrs. Charles Clark, and cousin, Joan Ellen Clark of Indianapolis, Ind.; Corp. Robert H. McBride of Grove City, Pa., and Mildred Kay Artman of Butler, Pa.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"Room 1512?" came the crisp interrogation over the telephone. If I had not known my husband's voice so well, I never would have recognized it, and I knew that he was purposely disguising it, even though the chances of anyone overhearing him were remote.

"Yes," I answered briefly.

"Two minutes ago," he said. "Do you understand?"

"Yes."

"Then watch your step! Goodbye."

The receiver clicked, and as I put it up, I turned to meet the housekeeper's inquiring eyes.

"The woman came into her room two minutes ago," I said. "But she probably will not come out for some time. Her appointment isn't until after eleven o'clock."

The housekeeper looked at her wrist watch.

No Danger of Discovery.

"And it lacks two minutes of nine," she said. "But you needn't be afraid of her seeing you. We'll just nip from the stairway into the room next hers. Your husband is on the other side, and she won't have a chance either to see you walk or hear you talk, your two danger points until after you're drilled. And the chances of her seeing you at all until you're ready for inspection are a thousand to one."

"Do you think I'll be able to get the voice and gait right?" I asked her, for Dicky's open criticism and her implied one had disturbed my confidence in my own histrionic ability.

"Why, of course you will!" she said confidently. "You wouldn't need any drill at all, except that this woman knows you and you don't want her attention drawn to any little thing out of the way."

Halloran sprang to my defense a trifle belligerently.

"Mrs. Graham is connected with the theater," he informed her. "She writes plays, and knows a lot about acting."

Provides a Model.

"That ought to make it very easy for her," the housekeeper said, "and for me," she added, smiling. "I'll just get you a model."

She went to the telephone and asked for the linen room.

"Tell Annie," she directed, "to come to 1722 immediately. "Put a relief maid on her work until she gets back. Tell her if I'm not already there, to go in, shut the door and wait for me. The room is vacant. Please repeat what I said."

She listened attentively, then with a quick, "That's right, thank you," hung up the receiver.

"Everything under control," she reported, smiling. "And now, if you're steady, we'll go up."

'All ready," I told her, and with a brief word of goodbye to Halloran, I followed her out of the room with something of the feeling, I imagined, of a woman going to the guillotine.

But nobody passed us on the stairs, and when we had climbed the two flights to the 17th floor, there was no sign of anyone in the corridor, although I knew that three of my father's men were lurking behind almost closed doors in nearby rooms.

Ruth's Door Closed.

The housekeeper had a key ready in her hand, and as she put it in the lock of 1722, I shot a quick glance at the door of 1720. It was tightly closed, and hung upon the knob was a "Do not disturb" sign.

"That's good!" the housekeeper commented when we were inside the room with our own door closed, and I knew that her quick eyes also had noted the card, although she had not appeared to be looking at the door at all. "She probably won't be asking for anything at all for a while," she added.

"She's probably lying down," I said, "resting before her appointment. I happen to know that she was out until three or four this morning."

"It's easy to find out what she's doing," the housekeeper said, and going to the telephone, she spoke in rapid, low tones.

"Housekeeper speaking," she said. "Have you had any instructions from 1720 who just checked in?" She paused, then finished. "Thank you. Goodbye."

She turned back to me with a smile.

Wanted to Be Called.

"Your hunch was right," she said. "She told the operator she didn't want to be disturbed by any call unless it came from one certain number; said she was going to sleep, and wanted to be called at half past ten on the dot."

With a sudden conviction flashing upon me, I put a question.

"Did she give you that certain number?" I asked.

"Yes," she answered, "and the operator commented that it was queer she did not give a name. The number was—"

I caught my breath at the confirmation of my suspicion. The number was Milner's unlisted personal number at the Lansfield!

Ensign Varner, George Bock Talk At Auxiliary Meeting

Ensign Thelma Varner of Cleveland and George Bock, yeoman first class of the local recruiting office, were heard Monday night when they spoke at the American Legion auxiliary meeting at the Legion home before 40 members.

Ensign Varner talked on WAVE enlistments. She and Mr. Bock were introduced by W. C. Mean, Richland county navy chairman.

Mrs. Harvey Dickson presided during the advancement of colors when junior members served as color guards.

Following group singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" and the repeating of the preamble of the Constitution, reports were given by the standing committee chairmen.

During the business meeting members decided to give a Bible to the Blue Star Mothers' club.

The state convention of the auxiliary will be held in Cincinnati, Aug. 7-10. The local auxiliary will be represented by Mrs. Marie Dickson, Mrs. Edith Metcalf and Mrs. Falsom Teeter. Mrs. Anna May Beckley will be a delegate-at-large as the past department president.

Program of the evening was presented by the junior auxiliary and included a piano solo by Miriam Bauer, specialty dances by Betty Bauman, Alice Callahan and Jean Boylan, and a baton duet.

Refreshments were served by the social committee at the close of the evening. That committee is headed by Mrs. Dan Matthes.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, July 28.

A rather difficult state of affairs is indicated by certain adverse aspects among important planets. There may be menace of fraud or imposition, with an undercurrent of treachery and intrigue. These may be overcome by shrewd attention to the logic and reasonableness of problematical situations. A danger may arise from too expansive and ambitious a view, as well as by looking at things from a morose, sullen and perhaps vindictive attitude. Rationalize any threatening circumstances, safeguard the position, property and other real possessions. Support from influential persons may change the complexion of difficulties.

Those whose birthday it is may turn a difficult and perplexing state of affairs from all adverse and menacing one into something gratifying and productive. An obstinate and morbid mental attitude may prove baneful. But in all efforts at stabilizing the position and property, be alert to snares, schemes and other intriguing predicaments. Keep eyes and ears open and work intelligently for cherished goals.

A child born on this day although inclined to be pensive and possessive, yet may have sturdy qualities to win support from those in power.

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

Galion high school gridders are making no secret of the fact that they are working out this summer, getting in shape for what they confidently expect will be a successful football season this fall.

What about the Ohio High School Athletic association rules?

There's nothing in the O. H. S. A. A. rules about how a boy shall find recreation and entertainment during the summer, so long as he does not engage in professional sport, or practice football under the direction of a coach.

And Coach Jimmy Lymper has nothing at all to do with the direction of the Orangemen in their summer antics. If they want to play tag with a football under their arms, or if they want to have a few wrestling matches, employing such recognized mat holds as the tackle and the flying block, Jimmy has nothing to say about it. He probably hopes they don't get hurt. But officially he is out of the picture

The Galion captain has taken it upon himself to see to it that the Orangemen take such exercise as will put them in physical condition, that's all.

Unofficial summer practice on some scale is nothing new in the state of Ohio.

There's hardly a coach in the state who does not hand out footballs and basketballs to some of his players with instructions to use these leather covered pellets for the purpose they were intended.

Of course the coach can't go along to see that the balls are kicked and tossed about in the proper manner.

I was slightly in error a few paragraphs back about the O H S. A. A. putting no restrictions on a boy's summer play.

It passed a rule this spring, directly aimed at Martins Ferry forbidding high school athletes from playing on organized basketball teams in playground league competition.

Martins Ferry has some fine cage courts in its playground setup, and these courts have turned out some fine teams for the Ferry high school

Martins Ferry laughed the whole thing off. "We can still teach youngsters how to play the game so they'll know what it's all about when they get to high school," officials taunted the O. H. S. A. A.

Chuck Condon, Mansfield Tyger fullback of the undefeated 1941 season, is back home and feeling better after the extraction of some spinal fluid last week at Cleveland Clinic.

Turned down by the army recently because of recurring headaches which Chuck attributed to having been kicked in the head during the Sandusky game two years ago, Condon went to Cleveland last week for an operation to end the headaches.

His mother reported today that the headaches have ceased, and there are hopes that they have permanently vanished.

Prospect Loses To Brinkerhoff

Larry Madden's victory string in the Junior Perks softball league was rudely shattered yesterday when Brinkerhoff got to him for seven runs in the first inning and drove on to a 12 10 win over Prospect.

* * *

Madden gave up 11 hits and six bases on balls, while Stevens limited the losers to six hits and issued six passes.

* * *

Johns park forfeited the other game to South Boulevard Midgets.

Dodgers Win Out In Tenth

Arky Vaughan Clouts Homer With Bases Full.

By TED MEIER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

A LAST second reprieve, in the form of Augie Galan's ninth inning single that tied the score followed by Arky Vaughan's grand slam homer with the bases full in the tenth, kept the Brooklyn Dodgers from tumbling into third place in the National league yesterday.

After walloping the Dodgers three in a row at Forbes field, the Pittsburgh Pirates, thanks to Vince DiMaggio's two homers, led, 6 to 7, going into the ninth. With two on and two out all that separated the Pirates from moving into second place was one strike. But with the count on him two and two Galan belted Max Butcher's next pitch for a single to score Dixie Walker from second base with the tying run.

* * *

This dramatic incident faded in the tenth when with three on and two out Vaughan socked a tremendous drive to deep center for an inside the park homer off Relief Pitcher Bill Brandt and a 10 to 6 Brooklyn triumph Butcher had been yanked after Billy Herman singled to start the tenth.

Brooklyn remained 8½ games out of first place, however, as the pace-setting St. Louis Cardinals made it nine in a row by beating the Boston Braves, 6 to 3.

In the American league the first place New York Yankees made only three hits off Jake Wade, but beat the Chicago White Sox anyway, 5 to 2. The victory stretched the Yanks' lead to eight games as the second place Detroit Tigers lost to the Philadelphia Athletics, 2 to 1

Catcher Ray Mueller walloped two homers, good for six runs, as the Cincinnati Reds thumped the Phillies 8 to 2, while the New York Giants ended a seven-game losing streak by beating the Chicago Cubs, 4 to 3.

The St Louis Browns snapped their five-game losing streak by defeating the Boston Red Sox, 7 to 1, behind Bob Mungrief's three-hit pitching.

Cleveland started a new winning streak by walloping Washington, 7 to 3, as Jim Bagby chalked up his 10th win of the campaign.

Ruth Pilots Yanklands

Cleveland, New York Team Meets Pre-Flight.

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— Twenty-two players from the Cleveland Indians and New York Yankees were chosen today for the war relief doubleheader between the "Yanklands," managed by Babe Ruth, and the North Carolina Pre-Flight team.

The contest will follow a regularly-scheduled game between the Indians and Yankees tomorrow.

The men selected were.

Cleveland: Oris Hockett, cf; Russ Peters, ss; Hank Edwards, rf; Jeff Heath, lf; Mickey Rocco, 1b; Ken Keltner, 3b; Ray Mack, 2b; Gene Desautels and George Susce, c; Ray Poat and Pete Center, p.

AP Features

THE Crawl stroke is built upon the coordination of three basic elements: smooth overarm stroking with both arms, breathing in rhythm with the arm stroke, and kicking both legs in an up and down scissors motion.

1. As the right arm is pulling through the water the left arm has completed its pull and is lifted from the water with the elbow bent

2. Left arm continues forward in the air, elbow still bent, while the head is turned (never lifted) to permit proper breathing.

3. The head does not lift as it is turned back to its original position and the left arm contacts the water straight ahead from the ear.

4. The right arm finishes its pull and is lifted from the water, elbow bent, as the left arm is stretched out full length to begin its pull.

5. As the left arm pulls, the right is brought forward. Smooth overarm stroking must be in coordination with all other body movements.

THE CRAWL KICK is a scissors motion in which the legs drive up and down without twisting the body. Be sure to keep the ankles loose, and the knees rigid, so that the drive comes from the hips.

Jug Wins Open Title With Home Made Heavy Putter

By LEO FISCHER

CHICAGO—(INS)—Harold (Jug) McSpaden of Philadelphia headed for home today with the championship of the All-American open golf tournament and the $2 000 first prize money.

O'Neal (Buck) White of Greenwood, Miss., an unknown who never had won a major title in his whole golfing career, still was without one, his 72 in the 18-hole play-off match at the Tam O'Shanter club being topped by McSpaden's 1 under par 71

His consolation was the $1,400 second place money.

For 17 holes yesterday it looked as if White were about to enter golf's hall of fame as he battled McSpaden for first place, the two having wound up in an 282 tie Sunday evening.

* * *

Then the door slammed in his face and McSpaden walked off with the title by that one stroke —a margin achieved by a miraculous 24-foot putt for a birdie on the final green.

The end came when it looked as if the match would go into extra holes, for both had agreed to continue on a "sudden death" basis if they finished their round still tied

They came into the stretch neck and neck Both put their second shots on the green McSpaden's was the farther away, so he shot first

Jug stepped up to the little white pill, surveyed the situation then calmly tapped the ball with his putter true as an arrow for the cup The ball hesitated just a heart-stopping second on the lip, then plunked in.

On a cold cash basis, the putt was worth about $25 a foot, for it represented the difference between the $2,000 first prize and the $1,400 for the runner-up.

* * *

McSpaden's explanation as he walked off the 18th green was simple Said he:

"I guess I had one long putt in my system today. That was the place to get it."

McSpaden, a good natured, happy-go-lucky pro from Merion, Pa., has been one of the top ranking golfers for the last eight years. He once won the Canadian open and one year reached the finals of the PGA tournament. Since 1937 he has been a member of the Ryder cup team, but the triumph in the all-American was the greatest in his career.

President George May of the Tam O'Shanter club announced that next year's tournament will be held from July 17 to 23 and that $10,000 will be put up in the open tournament—more if the war is over by then

With the bases loaded and two out in the last of the tenth, Hunt walked a run in for Prospect, and then struck out Hall to end the ball game.

Ebbert got a home run for Prospect.

Cates scored five runs in the fourth inning and trimmed North Lake 8-2 as Kenny Windsor let North down with two hits, and fanned 19.

Bill Regula blanked John Todd with four hits and fanned nine as Maple Lake scored an easy 15-0 victory.

NEW YORK—(AP)—That 4.05.3 mile of Gunder Haegg's has revived interest in his American tour . . . the Minnesota A.A.U. is asking about a meet for the Aug. 14 date that Washington gave up. Asa Bushnell is renewing his suggestion for a record trial on the fast Princeton track and the hot-and-cold farewell meet here is warming up again and probably will be held in Triboro stadium Aug. 18 or 19 . . . Gil Dodds will complete the tour with Haegg and Bill Hulse will go at least as far as next Saturday's Cleveland meet and maybe to Cincinnati the following week.

Wakefield Takes Batting Lead

NEW YORK—(AP)—Dick Wakefield, Detroit's $52,000 "beauty," is the new American league batting leader. Although he went hitless in four times against Jesse Flores of the Athletics last night the Tiger rookie outfielder held onto first place in the swatsmith parade by the slim margin of one point over Guy Curtright, of the White Sox, .326 to .325.

Wakefield, third a week ago, passed both Curtright and Vern Stephens of the Browns whose hitting fell off eight points and 14 points respectively. Stephens slump put him fourth as Luke Appling of the White Sox took over third with a .317 average to Stephens' .313. Stephens barely held fourth before the onrush of Oris Hockett of the Indians who got three in four against Washington last night to raise his mark to .312.

The National league's leader, Stan Musial of the Cards, slashed out 15 hits in 35 times at bat to boost his season average to .346 and put 16 points between himself and Billy Herman of Brooklyn runnerup at .330.

Leon Culberson of the Red Sox, Rog Cramer of Detroit, Johnny McCarthy of the Braves and Eric Tipton of Cincinnati each climbed into the list of the first 10 hitters in their respective leagues.

Tribe Defeats Nats, Make First Division

Bagby Registers Tenth Victory As Indians Find Batting Eyes

NEW YORK—(AP)—Hitting power has returned to the Cleveland Indians and the Indians have returned to first division—twin developments that herald the opening today of a four-game series with the league-leading New York Yankees.

The Tribe boomed out 12 hits last night—including four doubles and a triple—to whip Washington 7 to 3, and end the series with a margin of three games to one.

It was Jim Bagby's tenth victory of the season. He held the Senators to five hits, as the Indians were fashioning nine hits off Early Wynn before he was replaced in the eighth. Milt Haefner pitched one hit and one inning and gave way to a pinch hitter as Alex Carresquel finished on the mound for Washington.

With the triumph the Indians moved into sole possession of fourth place, half a game back of the Senators and one full game behind Detroit.

Oris Hockett led last night's attack with three singles. Ray Mack, moved from eighth to second in the batting order, justified the comeuppance by banging out a single and a double, driving in two runs and scoring two.

BATTLE BRAVES

CINCINNATI — (AP) — Casey Stengel and his Boston Braves move in on Crosley Field today for a series with the Cincinnati Reds

Either Bucky Walters or Johnny Vander Meer will hurl for the Reds, against him Tobin for Boston.

Local tub thumpers are pointing to tomorrow's twilight-night doubleheader as one of the highlights of the season. In the first game, a combination Boston-Cincinnati team will take the field against the Great Lakes Naval Training center's team led by Mickey Cochrane. The Reds and Braves tangle in a regulation contest under the lights to round out the proceedings. The receipts are earmarked for the American Red Cross.

The Reds ended their four-game series with the Philadelphia Phils yesterday by winning 8 to 2 to grab the series three games to one.

Ray Mueller bashed out two homers to drive in six runs and carry off hitting honors.

Jack Kraus was Mueller's first victim, falling in the third inning, while Newt Kimball, who later in the day was sold by the Phil management to the Milwaukee Brewers in the American association, threw a four-base pitch at the Cincinnati catcher in the fifth.

Ray Starr on the mound for the Reds won his tenth victory of the season.

Hamburg Left In Flames By Fifth Raid In 48 Hours

ALLIES DRIVE TO DEVASTATE NAZI SEAPORT

RAF Strikes By Night, Yanks By Day In Gigantic Air Assault.

BULLETIN

LONDON — (U.P.) — Great destruction was inflicted on the German reserve rubber stock in Monday's Flying Fortress attack on the Gummiwerker rubber tire factory at Hanover, and a column of fire and smoke rose to 20,000 feet, an official statement said today.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—Hundreds of Allied fighters and light bombers attacked industrial targets at Zeebrugge and enemy airfields elsewhere in Belgium and in Holland by daylight today, the air ministry announced.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—For the fifth time in 48 hours Hamburg was attacked from the air last night as the RAF sent Mosquito bombers over the German seaport for the third successive night, the British air ministry news service said today.

Returning crews said there was a clear sky over the devastated city and flames could be seen while they were more than 30 miles from the target

Airmen were quoted as saying the flak was not so intense as had been expected but there were some night fighters on patrol.

The air battle designed apparently to flatten Germany's great port of Hamburg began Saturday night when RAF heavy bombers carried out the greatest raid of the war in dropping 2 300 long tons of explosives and incendiaries. Since that time the RAF and the USAAF have kept up round-the-clock attacks.

The USAAF hit the port in daylight Sunday with a large fleet of heavy bombers and the same night RAF Mosquitos took up the attack. The Americans raided the city in daylight again yesterday.

The air offensive rolled on unchecked throughout daylight today with Allied formations crossing the Dover straits toward the Calais area. The aircraft winging over the channel in brilliant sunshine appeared to be fighters.

RAF reconnaissance pilots went to Essen yesterday to view the devastation from the heavy attack by RAF heavy bombers Sunday night. They reported fierce fires were still burning there.

Sharing the weight of the American assault with Hamburg in daylight yesterday were three other northwest German cities—Hanover, Wilhelmshaven and Wesermunde.

American medium bombers dumped their cargoes on the German airfield at St. Omer, France, while British medium, light and fighter bombers attacked Courtrai, Abbeville and Melville. American Thunderbolt fighters made wide sweeps over the French and Dutch coasts.

Returning raiders said German fighter opposition was spotty but the Allies had the better of the situation for a final check showed 54 Axis planes shot down against 26 for the Allies.

Heaviest opposition was reported at Hanover, where the Americans struck at two synthetic rubber plants employing 50,000 workers. The American pilots said the flak was heavy and they were opposed by a force of from 75 to 100 fighter planes, of which they destroyed 33.

An Allied communique said good results were observed on all of the targets.

NAZIS THOUGHT THEY'D BE SUNK

Sergeant Reveals Prisoners Never Expected to Get Here.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — German prisoners en route from North Africa doubted that they would ever reach America. Steeped in legends of Nazi U-boat successes, the Germans gloomily prophesided: "We'll never make it."

The war department revealed this, quoting Sgt. Major William Borne of the 1st Composite British anti-aircraft battery.

"The Nazis were confident U-boats would blast us out of the war before we half completed the crossing," Borne said. "But you should have seen their faces when they saw New York. They were all smiles."

DAMAGE SUIT HEARING SET

The $1,500 damage suit brought against the city of Mansfield by Anna Zerby for alleged deprivation of property rights will be heard in common pleas court tomorrow.

Mrs. Zerby, owner of outlot 193 on South Main street, has charged the city with negligent actions in the development of East Raleigh street which made it necessary for her to put up a retaining wall to keep the south bank of her lot from washing down.

She also alleges that sewage and other refuse backed up from the sewer into her basement.

DEFENSE VIEWS BROUGHT FALL

Rome Travelers Report That Ex-Duce Supported Hitler Stand on Withdrawal.

would be left with the problem of supplying the population.

At Mussolini's suggestion, a meeting of the Fascist council was called for Saturday. Meantime, although il duce expressed his disgust at the German plans, other party leaders including Count Galeazzo Ciano, Mussolini's son-in-law, met separately with non-party men.

The council meeting lasted until 2 a. m. Sunday. After Mussolini made a report, opposition formed to attack his conduct of the war and particularly his apparent acceptance of the German plan.

On the vote, only six council members stood with Mussolini's argument that the only way open was to accept the Hitler scheme, while 19 others were in open opposition.

This vote was taken early in the meeting and Mussolini announced that in the face of such opposition he considered it necessary to resign.

A long discussion followed concerning the fate of the Fascist party in event of his resignation, but by the time the meeting broke up it was agreed that the Fascist organization was secondary to what the members believed was the Italian future.

Early Sunday morning, Mussolini went to the royal palace and handed his resignation to King Vittorio Emmanuel who was kept informed of the progress of the meeting and had talked with Badoglio.

Before the public was informed of the event, the party took steps designed in part to protect the leaders and in part to hold those considered responsible for the state of the nation's affairs.

Then the announcement was made Sunday night after Badoglio had advised the Germans of his decision that "all Italy must be defended or Italy must leave the war," and the Germans agreed, faced with that alternative, to help in defense of the whole peninsula.

The enthusiasms which greeted announcement of Mussolini's resignation and Badoglio's appointment was tremendous throughout Italy. Demonstrations formed in every major Italian city.

In Rome, Fascist militia garrisons made preparations to resist, but crumbled swiftly when Badoglio sent regular army units fully prepared for action to demand their surrender, with notes advising them they were units now incorporated into the army and subject to army discipline.

Everywhere in Rome crowds marched in the streets cheering the royal family and Badoglio and thousands marched to the Vatican gates to cheer the Pope.

Cites Nationalism Barriers As Big Post-War Problem

Breaking down barriers of nationalism will be the outstanding problem in seeking a way to permanent world peace, according to views expressed by Baldwin H. Ward, of the Cleveland Council on World Affairs, in an address at today's meeting of the Rotary club, held at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Nationalism was defined as "a consciousness of group unity, an over-valuation of one's own nation and an under-valuation of others, a glorification of the nation-state."

This, Ward contended, results in competition between nations and has been the main cause of wars, being based on the theory of self-sufficiency rather than co-operation.

Many efforts have been made, Ward revealed, to establish international machinery for co-operation among nations, with some degree of success but never yet to the point of removing causes of wars.

The League of Nations, he said, made the nearest approach to this accomplishment, but it was an organization designed to secure voluntary co-operation, not to exercise compulsion upon its members

"For the United States to participate in a practicable plan for permanent peace," he said, "it would be necessary to give up the right to restrict trade, as well as the right to use force."

"International goodwill and co-operation," Ward concluded, "would result in greater prosperity, improve standards of living, and lead the way toward lasting peace throughout the world.

Howard Gongwer, president of the club, presided at the meeting and introduced the speaker. William R. Riester was received into club membership.

WOMAN GIVEN 30-DAY TERM

Vera Lane, 31, today began a 30-day sentence in the county jail after she was found guilty in juvenile court yesterday of contributing to the delinquency of her 10-year-old daughter.

The child who had been in the care of an aunt was being molested by her mother when sheriff's deputies were called to the aunt's home on Springmill street.

Judge Stuart H. Cramer sentenced the woman, after she pleaded guilty, to 30 days in the county jail, 20 days suspended, court costs and put her on three year probation.

Warns Motorists To 'Refinish' Old License Plates

Better get a can of paint and "refinish" your old auto license tags so they'll last until next spring.

Police Chief Meade K. Bates today warned Mansfield motorists that rusty and otherwise damaged plates must be reconditioned to make them legible from a distance of 50 feet or police will begin making arrests for driving with illegible tags.

Blanks which may be obtained from the police chief permit a motorist to drive with one tag while the other is being repainted. The other alternative is to put the car in the garage while both tags are reconditioned.

If the motorist is handy with a paint brush, it's permissible for him to repaint his own tags. Otherwise he'd better take them to a paint shop.

Bates said the new paint must be identical in color with that already on the tags.

The 1942 plates must last through this year. One new tag per car will be issued in 1944.

NELSON STARTS DRIVE TO GET MORE PULPWOOD

Big Newspapers To Finance Promotion By Assessment on Newsprint.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON —WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson today called for a stimulation of pulpwood production to offset critical shortages of that material in the manufacture of war goods and newsprint.

Following a conference with Walter M. Dear, newly-appointed chairman of the American newspaper Publishers' association pulpwood committee, Nelson said:

"I am today asking the War Production drive to lend their fullest assistance in stimulating the cutting of pulpwood as a continuing program of the drive's promotion activities.

"Since there is an increasingly critical shortage of pulpwood—the raw material for making smokeless powder, rayon for parachutes and a multitude of containers for shipping ammunition, food, blood plasma and other supplies as well as print paper, this phase of the drive is one of primary and immediate importance."

Dear said that 2,000 newspapers in the United States, from large metropolitan dailies to small weeklies, will participate in the campaign to increase production of pulpwood for war.

The campaign will be financed, Dear said, by the large dailies on the basis of five cents per ton for newsprint consumed in 1942.

"Funds thus raised will be expended by the committee in publicity, promotional material and paid advertising in weekly and small daily newspapers in 27 pulpwood producing states in the south, northeast and Great Lakes area," Dear declared.

Approximately 1,500 committees will be organized in local communities to further the campaign, Dear said, with weekly newspaper editors, extension or state foresters, county agents, mill representatives and wood procurement men asked to serve.

Dear said that advertising in weekly and daily newspapers will start in early August and continue through October.

Awarded Medal

Oldest of the 10,000 members of the American Poultry association is 84-year-old Charles McClave of New London. A member for 61 years, he has just returned home from Chicago where he spent a week attending the annual convention of the association. He was awarded a 50-year gold medal at the Cleveland exposition. McClave raises pure bred poultry on his farm one mile south of New London.

WARNS OF FUEL OIL DEADLINE

Renewal applications for fuel oil for the home must be sent in to the ration board on or before Sept. 1, local officials said today.

Approximately 300 applications for renewal have been sent out, but only about 125 have been returned thus far, they said.

Officials also asked that persons losing ration book No. 3 or not receiving it, wait until after Aug. 1 to apply at the board for new books.

CITY GETS SET TO OPEN BIDS

Street Resurfacing, Police, Radio, Water Contracts To Be Let Aug. 10.

Bids on three city projects, including the resurfacing of East Fifth street, installation of new police radio equipment, and construction of an additional well at the Maxwell Springs pumping station, will be opened Aug. 10, Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff said today.

The $21,000 East Fifth street job calls for improvement of the street from Main street to the Pennsylvania railroad. Cost of the work will be paid jointly by the city, property owners, and the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

The new radio equipment, expected to cost about $4,500, will give the city's police transmitter more power and enable cruisers to communicate with other police cars, with headquarters, and the Massillon state highway patrol station.

Construction of another well in the Maxwell Springs area will supplement the city's war supply which has been heavily taxed this summer because of the step up in industrial operations in the city area.

Bids on furnishing crushed gravel for city construction jobs also will be opened Aug. 10.

ODT MEETING SET FOR CITY

Brewers, Indians In Crucial Series

(By Associated Press)

Milwaukee and Indianapolis bring their first place feuding in the American Association to a head tonight when they clash at Milwaukee in a double header.

The start of the important series finds Milwaukee with a game and a half advantage over the Indians. Both teams won their games last night, the only ones played.

* * *

Milwaukee stopped the third place Columbus Redbirds, 6 to 1, while Indianapolis rode over St. Paul, 8 to 1.

Weather halted the Louisville-Minneapolis contest. Toledo and Kansas City were not scheduled.

IF TILLIE'S GOT A FURLOUGH THE ONLY WAY TO SPEND IT IS ON A HONEYMOON
A LONG THREAD, TILLIE. THAT MEANS YOU'RE GOING ON A LONG JOURNEY
YES, I AM—
AFTER MY FURLOUGH, I REPORT TO CAMP BUSBY. I FORGOT TO TELL YOU
MAC, WHAT ARE YOU DOING?
I'M TRYING TO FORGET TO TELL YOU WHAT I FEEL LIKE TELLING YOU

JUDGE PUFFLE— By Gene Ahern

IT CAME ABOUT THIS WAY, NEIGHBOR MORGAN—
I WAS GOING TO SPEND MY VACATION AT AN EXCLUSIVE MOUNTAIN CAMP— BUT I FELT HELPING WITH THE HARVEST OF GREATER IMPORTANCE, AND A PATRIOTIC DUTY!— EVERY SHOULDER TO THE WHEEL, Y'KNOW!
ON CLOSE EXAMINATION, THEY'D FIND YOU LEANING ON IT!— GET BUSY WITH THIS HAY,— YOU'RE NOT AT HOME GAFFING TO ME, OVER THE FENCE!
THE JUDGE IS IMAGINING A FENCE—

If you ever need $25, $50, $100 or more quickly and simply, come to Household Finance. If you have a job so that you can repay in small monthly payments, you are welcome to apply for any amount up to $1000. The sooner you repay the less your loan costs. Example: A $50 loan repaid in 6 monthly instalments of $9.24 each costs $5.44—if repaid in one month the cost is only $1.50. No endorsers or guarantors are ever needed. We never make inquiries of friends or relatives.

MILD RECOVERY TENDENCY SEEN IN STOCK LIST

Business Loans Fall Off as Demand Deposits Adjusted Record Increase.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Mild recovery tendencies appeared in today's early stock proceedings although many leaders continued in the minus ranks.

Up small fractions at a quiet opening were U. S. Rubber, American Telephone, Douglas Aircraft, Sperry, Youngstown Sheet and International Telephone.

Market analysts studied the Federal Reserve summary estimating demand deposits-adjusted of member banks in 23 cities for the week ended July 21 rose $503,000,000 while U. S. government deposits decreased $628,000,000. Business loans in the same period fell $20,000,000 and borrowings of brokers and dealers in securities declined $154,000,000.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO —(AP)— Uncertainty over the future course of the war caused some uneasiness in grain prices early today and the market generally sagged.

Wheat started ⅛-⅜ lower than yesterday's finish, $1.43¾-¾, but subsequently rallied. Rye started ⅝ lower to ⅜ higher. September $1.03½. Oats were ¼ lower to ⅛ higher.

GALION HOGS

GALION—Market higher; receipts 50: 120-150 lbs. $11.75 150-170 lbs. $12.75; 180-180 lbs. $13.05 180-250 lbs. $13.35; 250-300 lbs. $13.15 300-350 lbs. $13.00; sows up to 400 lbs. $12.75 400-450 lbs. $12.50. 450-600 lbs. $12.25

Face Treason Trial

Treason indictments have been returned by a federal grand jury in Washington against eight American citizens who have been engaged in broadcasting enemy propaganda from Germany and Italy. Among those named in the indictments are the two pictured above: Constance Drexel, 48, formerly of Philadelphia, and Edward Delaney, 57, formerly of Olney, Ill. The woman, a former newspaperwoman, has been broadcasting from Germany since 1940 and has been falsely billed as a member of a socially-prominent Philadelphia family.

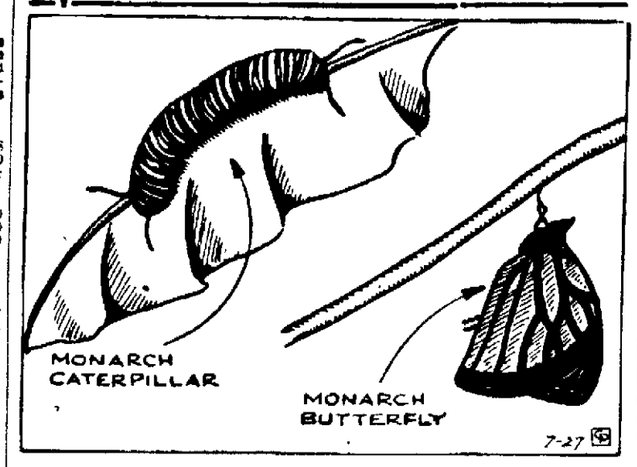
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Insect Allies of the Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
(Released by Central Press Ass'n.)

Two staunch allies of the Victory gardener are the monarch caterpillar and the monarch terfly. Both, in a sense, help to keep down weeds. The monarch butterfly is an ally because her egg laying paves the way for weed control when they hatch.

The monarch butterfly, illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, has orange-brown wings with black veins and borders of black. It will only lay its eggs on the milkweed plant. When these eggs hatch the young larva, or monarch caterpillars, devour the milkweed leaves and so weaken the plant that it does not set seed, thus saving many gardens from a plague of these weeds.

The monarch caterpillar, illustrated in the Garden-Graph, on a milkweed leaf, is light yellow in color with a greenish tinge banded with black.

Other friends of the Victory gardener are the tortoise-shell and the peacock butterflies. Their caterpillars feed on the stinging nettle and in so doing cause many of these weeds to weaken and die. Nettles and thistles are kept in check in many cases by the painted-lady caterpillars. The swallow-tail caterpillars do their best to help gardeners by feeding on the leaves of wild carrot and the marsh parsley.

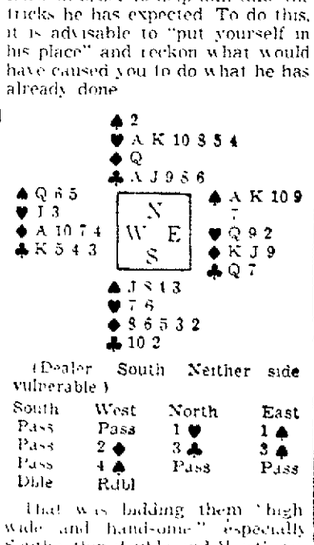
"The Authority on Authorities"

WHAT COULD HE HOLD?

When your partner has doubled the opponents' contract, and it is apparent that the outcome is going to be very close, it is up to you to figure out the best you can just what he had as a basis for his double. Doing that may show you how to play your cards on the defense in order to help him take the tricks he has expected. To do this, it is advisable to "put yourself in his place" and reckon what would have caused you to do what he has already done.



(Dealer South Neither side vulnerable)

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♥	1 ♠
Pass	2 ♦	3 ♣	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
Dble	Rdbl

That was bidding them "high wide and hand-some" especially South's thin double and West's redouble. But the one whose action really decided the issue was North, in the play of the hand.

South opened the heart 6, which north won with the K. He laid down the A and then, "just to see what South would play" scored with his club A. It was still not too late to set the contract, but he now indulged in some very hay-wire thinking. "Since the 2 which South played on the club A could not possibly be the top of a doubleton, and was not likely to be the bottom of three, it must be a singleton."

So North returned his club 8, the Q winning, and the contract was made. East led the spade 9, let it run when South played low, and then the 10. The J and Q covered this, the A and K settled South's other trumps, and East had the rest of the tricks solidly.

If North, after his second heart trick had reckoned that South surely had at least four trumps to the J for his bad double, and also must have one of the intermediates higher than the 6 in dummy, he should have returned a third heart. South's 8 would have forced the Q, and there would then have been no way to keep his J from taking the setting trick.

Hold Initiation—At the regular meeting of the Lions club at 6:30 p. m. Wednesday, A. D. Thomas, J. W. Miller, E. J. Culp and C. A. Wiseman will be initiated into the organization. A report on the international convention in Cleveland last week will be given by Dr. Paul Maxwell.

Oiling Half Done—Dust treating of Mansfield streets and alleys is slightly more than half completed, and the hot weather of the past few days has enabled city employes to make rapid progress with the work, Street Superintendent C. H. Hebel said. Streets which are heaviest traveled will be treated first and then alleys will be oiled, he said. The city this year is using a new type of anti-dust material which makes it necessary for traffic to remain off the treated streets for at least 48 hours.

Speeder Cited—Franklin B. Zieg, Fredericktown, yesterday was ordered to appear in Mansfield traffic court Wednesday afternoon on a speeding charge. He was arrested Monday on Lexington avenue and posted $25 bond.

Uses Wrong Tags — Pleading guilty in municipal court today to a charge of driving an automobile with license plates issued for another car, Herbert M. Robinson, 19½ East Fourth street, was fined $24 and costs by Acting Judge J. V. Will.

Fine Suspended—James Little, proprietor of the Subway Inn, Park avenue east, was fined $5 and costs today after he was found guilty in municipal court of assault and battery. The fine was suspended on the condition of good behavior. The charge was filed by Willard Kinion, a customer at the restaurant.

WARNS ITALY SURRENDER OR FACE DISASTER

Churchill Reveals New Regime Has Made No Offers of Peace.

lies' task in the meantime to let the Italians "stew in their own juice for a bit and hot up the fire to the utmost in order to accelerate the process."

He hinted strongly that further developments might come at any time with chances good that he might be able to make a further illuminating statement next week.

Britain and the United States will make no attempt to exert influence on the Italian government except through the pressure of "relentless war," he said

Churchill made only brief references during his 36-minute speech to Germany, but did assert that German hopes of turning the tide of war through their submarine campaign were "sinking as fast as their U-boats themselves."

He forecast that the whole Nazi outlook on war would be disturbed and broken by the events progressing in Italy with "the overthrow and casting down in shame of the first of the dictators and aggressor war lords striking the death knell of impending doom in the ears of those who remain."

The prime minister said the Allies hoped to obtain surrender of all Italy at one time rather than piecemeal and also to have the Anglo-American armies enter the country as "rescuers" rather than "tyrants" who would have to police the land.

The Allied armies already at the portals of the Italian mainland, he said, can bring "if the Italian people so decide, relief from war and freedom from servitude and, after an interval, a respectable place in the new and rescued Europe."

Britain is acting in concert with the United States, Churchill said, and he personally is in daily contact with President Roosevelt. Russia is being kept regularly informed of the decisions, he added

Churchill received one of his greatest ovations from commons when he entered the chamber, smiling broadly, at the end of the question period.

The speech was interrupted frequently by cheers and laughter and another ovation followed at the end. Every seat in the chamber was filled and all galleries packed. Mrs. Churchill sat in the distinguished strangers' gallery and high United States officials and diplomats from many other countries also were present.

The end of Premier Benito Mussolini's "long and severe" reign over the Italian people undoubtedly marks the close of an epoch in the life of Italy, he said.

"It doesn't seem unlikely that the enture Fascist edifice will fall to the ground in ruins if it has not already so fallen," Churchill said

He described the deposal of Mussolini as "the downfall of one of the principal criminals of this desolating war."

"We may reasonably expect that very great changes will take place in Italy," he said "What their form will be and how it will impinge upon the forces of German occupation and control, it is too early to forecast.

"That is one defense for the people of Italy, although it cannot be a real and valid defense for any country or people which allows freedom and inherent rights to pass out of its hands," he said. "The guilt and folly of Mussolini have cost the Italian people dear."

Churchill said he could not doubt that the main wish of the Italian people is to be quit of their German task masters"

He pointed out that British and American armies which occupied Italian Africa and the bulk of Sicily stand at the portals of the Italian mainland

"What is it these vast forces bring to Italy?" he asked "They bring, if the Italian people so decide, relief from war and freedom from servitude and, after an interval, a respectable place in the new and rescued Europe"

"Should the Italians choose that the Germans should have their way,' he said 'no choice will be left open to us'

"We shall continue to make war on Italy from every quarter'

He said the Germans naturally desired that Italy should become a preliminary background for the war in Europe and that by "Italian sufferings, the ravages of war shall be kept as far away as possible and as long as possible from the German fatherland"

So far, he said the Allies have received no approaches from the Italian government and therefore no decisions as to Italy's future need be made by Allied governments at this time

He asserted that any decision by Italy to continue under the German yoke would not seriously affect the general course of the war and still less alter its ultimate results.

"The only consequence would be that in the next few months Italy would be seared, scarred and blackened from one end to the other," he said.

"We certainly do not seek to reduce Italian life to a condition of chaos and anarchy and find ourselves without an authority with which to deal." Such chaos, he said, would impose upon the Allies an immense garrisoning task such as Germany faces in her occupied territory.

"We must be careful not to get into that kind of a position into which the Germans blundered in so many countries," he said. ...

"It is to the interests of Italy and also to the interests of the Allies that the unconditional surrender of Italy should be brought about wholesale, and not piecemeal. Whether this can be accomplished or not I cannot tell. . .

"We should allow the Italians — to use a homely phrase — to stew in their own juice for a bit and hot up the fire to the utmost in order to accelerate the process until we obtain through their government, or whoever possesses the necessary authority, the indispensable requirement that we demand for carrying on the war against our prime and capital foe, which is not Italy, but Germany."

Churchill appealed to persons who were not in possession of all the necessary facts to refrain from speaking or writing anything which "might add to the tasks of our armies."

"We are acting in the closest concert with the United States," he said, "and Russia is being kept regularly informed. The British and American governments are in continuous consulation."

Churchill said he was in daily contact with President Roosevelt.

It may be possible for him to make a further statement regarding the Mediterranean and the whole war position before parliament rises from the summer recess, he said, but he could make no promises because he did not know whether a point "would be reached next week from which a general survey could usefully be made."

Churchill estimated Italy's war power at "perhaps about one-tenth that of Germany," but warned that German strength is still massive.

"The Nazis war machine is a hateful incubus upon Europe which we resolve utterly to destroy and the affairs of Italy must be handled with this supreme objective in view," he said

"Both our strategy and our policy have been vindicated by events and I look forward to offering to parliament as the months unfold further convincing proof of this assurance."

Neutrals Expect Peace Overtures

BERN, Switzerland—(AP)—While Premier Pietro Badoglio and his newly-formed cabinet set about the task of maintaining order and sweeping Italy of at least the outward symbols of Fascism, reports from Rome indicate a popular belief there that one of the first acts of the new government would be a request for an armistice

(In London Reuters quoted a Bern dispatch to the Svenska Dagbladet in Stockholm as saying preliminary negotiations for an armistice between Italy and the Allies began in Vatican City last night. There was no immediate confirmation of this report, however.

(The Svenska Dagbladet dispatch also said German Ambassador Hans Georg Victor von Mackensen was holding a series of talks with Premier Badoglio, apparently to learn the latter's attitude toward Germany.

While Badoglio has not yet officially proclaimed the Fascist party dead, the new premier and his ministers are cleaning house throughout the nation The Fascist party headquarters have been taken over, Benito Mussolini and other high Fascists are reported under protective custody, and the national police force has been reorganized under a military administration, according to political and diplomatic reports from the Italian capital

Disorders have been surprisingly few, according to these sources

Report Hitler Wants To See Badoglio

MADRID—(AP)—Berlin dispatches to the Madrid newspaper Informaciones suggested today that Adolf Hitler, apparently taken by surprise by Premier Mussolini's resignation would like very much to arrange a meeting with his successor, Marshal Pietro Badoglio

The Berlin correspondent of the newspaper quoted a German foreign office spokesman as saying Mussolini's resignation had nothing to do with his conference with Hitler last week and inferred the fuehrer was greatly surprised.

There were indications, too, that the Germans were hurrying military preparations designed to plug up holes which might be left in the Balkans should Italy bow out of the war or should Italian troops there decide to go home

Report Mussolini's Paper Suppressed

LONDON—(AP)—The Swiss radio said today that Benito Mussolini's newspaper Il Ponolo D'Italia at Milan had been suppressed by the new government and had not appeared since Friday The paper's plant previously was reported to have been burned by Italians demonstrating over Mussolini's ouster from office

Warn Communists Seek Power In Italy

NEW YORK — (UP) — A committee of prominent Italian-Americans, organized on a nation-wide basis to promote a just peace for Italy, warned today that communists are seeking to control post-war Italy.

"We don't want Italy to go from a fascist to a communist type of dictatorship," the committee said at its organization meeting yesterday when a program calling for a "genuine democratic unity in the Italian-American community" was adopted.

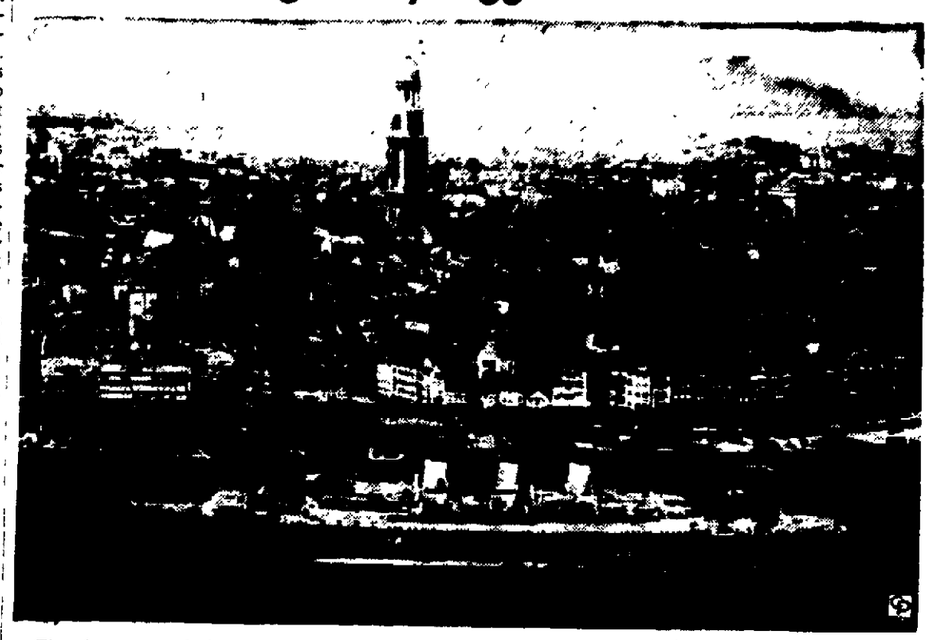
Story of Italian Peace Move Persists

STOCKHOLM —(INS)— Reports of preliminary Italian discussions with the Vatican for a separate peace with the Allies persisted in Stockholm today as anti-war and anti-Fascist demonstrations swept Italy

Rome radio broadcasts insisting that life had returned to normal in the Italian capital admitted that "great manifestations" had occurred

These apparently took the form of street parades denouncing Fascism and appealing for peace, as well as more violent episodes, including the burning of the historic "house of Fascism" on the shores of Lake Como and the destruction of newspaper offices at Milan.

Hamburg Hit By Biggest Raid Of War



This fine view of the harbor and business district of Hamburg shows what Germany's seaport city looked like before the Allies began to bomb it from the air. The 99th and latest air raid on Hamburg was the heaviest concentration of explosives and fire bombs ever dropped on a single city since the war began. More than 2 300 tons of bombs were dropped on this seaport city in the raid.

Galion Flier On Hamburg Raid Had Double Task To Perform

family in Galion was "rather surprised to hear about Howard" but she said that she thought from little hints he had dropped in his letters he had seen action before.

Lieut. Ness, a graduate of Galion high school in 1939, attended Ohio State university one year before enlisting in the Air Forces April 17, 1942

He received his primary training at Dos Palos, Calif., and his basic training at Chico, Calif. Graduating at Luke Field, Ariz., on Jan. 4, 1943, he was commissioned as a second lieutenant. Following his fighter training, Lieut. Ness went to Pyote, Tex., to study combat bomber training He left Morrison Field, Fla., April 2 for overseas duty.

Other Ohioans taking part in the raid were photographer Sgt. Martin Kagley of Cleveland Heights, Staff Sgt. John C. Denayer of Canton and Lieut. Martin C Minnich of Piqua.

house-to-house survey are designed to provide the WAC with an estimate of the number of women in Mansfield who are eligible for the WAC. Interviews for those interested in joining are arranged, Lieut. Genevieve Rustvold said.

A staff of 12 WACs are on duty here to supply information and assist in recruiting work

Meanwhile today, the recruiters announced that to further enlighten the public on the WAC, a movie "A Day in the Life of a WAC" will be shown at the Ohio theater on Wednesday Thursday, and Friday

The picture gives the public an idea of the various kinds of duties which the WACs perform and also shows events in the daily life of a girl while in WAC training

The picture is released by the WAC recruiting office in Cleveland.

STORE MANAGER FACES REMOVAL

Clevelander Charged With Selling Too Much Liquor.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—State Liquor Director Don A Fisher said today that removal charges would be filed against a Cleveland liquor store manager who sold 24 pints of whisky to one person.

The rationed quota per person is two pints a month

Fisher said that Moe L. Young, acting manager of a state dispensary at Cleveland, had been suspended under Civil Service regulations, and that the removal charges would be brought within 30 days.

Set Up Details For September Harvest Show

Richland county victory gardeners will get a chance to display the results of their season's work and win prizes with their vegetables at a county-wide harvest festival Sept. 11 and 12 at the Mansfield Armory.

Plans for the show were formulated last night at a victory garden committee meeting in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

Granges, industrial plants and individual gardeners will be invited to exhibit their garden products, including tomatoes, squashes, beans, sweet corn, carrots, turnips, and other vegetables that are harvested late in the summer.

Display booths will be set up in the armory for civilian defense organizations and others affiliated with the production of food. A small admision charge will be made for the show.

GET SECOND FALSE ALARM

Firemen at Central station were in an unpleasant humor today after receiving the second false alarm from the same place in the past three nights

They were awakened about 12.30 a m today to make a run to Fifth and Mulberry streets to find that a jokester had repeated a prank of three nights ago when an alarm was turned in at the same spot.

Fire Chief C. J. Seeburger blamed boys, explaining that the guilty persons disappeared quickly after the alarm was sounded.

TOLEDO ADDED

CLEVELAND —(AP)— The War Manpower Commission today added Toledo to the growing list of Ohio cities where the 48-hour week is mandatory for essential industries.

Robert G. Goodwin, WMC regional director, said the longer work week would be required for Toledo and all of Lucas county effective Sept 1 for all essential industries employing eight or more persons in that area, and would affect more than 90,000 workers.

BUTTER POINT COST GOES UP

Increase of Two Points To Bring Value To 10 Aug. 1, OPA Announces.

Backbones, ration free, down one.

Plates, regular, three points, down one.

Bacon plate and Jowl squares, three points, down one.

READY-TO-EAT MEATS—

Picnic or shoulder slices, 11 points (new item).

Pigs feet, bone end, one point, down one

MEATS (in tin or glass containers)—

Meat spreads, five points, down one.

Pigs feet (bone end), one point, downone.

BEEF—

English cut roasts, nine points (new item).

The two new items—picnic or shoulder slices and English cuts of beef—make little difference to the consumer. In the past, butchers have sold picnic slices and fixed point values in accordance with ham slice values, and the changes merely fixes a specific value for the item. Similarly, English cuts of beef, a type of chuck roast have cost the same under a different name. In establishing the English cut classification, OPA said it merely followed trade practices in certain areas.

The new table of point values for kosher meats likewise makes no important changes in point values.

JACK'S OUT

Says He Won't Enter Race For Mayor of Cleveland.

CLEVELAND—(INS)—William S. (Bill) Jack, head of the famous Jack & Heintz, Inc., will not be a candidate for mayor of Cleveland, he announced today.

Meanwhile, Mayor Frank J. Lausche, Democrat, became the first mayoralty candidate of record when he filed his petitions of candidacy for re-election Edward C. Stanton, former Cuyahoga county prosecuting attorney, has the backing of the Republican organization for the GOP nomination.

You remember your reaction when you read that the Japs slaughtered our fliers. You felt wrathful, and still do. Well—here's a wonderful chance to do something about it! Fill your Stamp Album this week—for every dollar's worth of War Savings Stamps you buy will pour bombs on the enemy!

"THE MYSTERY SHIP"

There was a day when American airplanes charged at Japan in a bombing that will never be forgotten. No one knew how or when the planes that carried those bombs reached their taking-off place. Our president referred to their base as a mid-ocean "Shangri-La."

Now we are readying for more and greater bombings of Japan. And this time the Shangri-La will be an actuality: a real airplane carrier by that name which will carry destruction to the enemy.

It's in your power to build that mystery ship . . . with your small change. A dollar in War Stamps from you is your share —but the more the better! Every man . . . every woman . . . every child in the United States must consider this a personal responsibility: one so easily carried out!

roceeding "according to plan." However, the Germans were manging to stiffen their resistance s the Americans drove into the arder core of the enemy's defense ositions.

Medium bombers attacked railay communications at Marina Di aola in southern Italy while light ombers and fighter-bombers coninued the assault upon shipping n Sicilian harbors and on road ommunications on the island, the llied communique said.

On the night of July 25-26 the ort of Milazzo, Sicily, was atacked by medium bombers. Toredo-carrying aircraft sank an enmy merchant vessel in the Tyrenian sea.

Activity on the Catania front here the Germans are fighting o hold the gateway to the Messina escape port was still confined o patrol action.

(The Italian communique, recorded by the Associated Press from a Rome broadcast, reported another series of Allied raids on the Naples area and the region of Messina strait, and said anti-aircraft defenses and Italian fighters shot down eight planes in duels off Sardinia.

(German warplanes, the communique said, attacked warships nd merchantmen off the northrn and eastern coasts of Sicily nd heavily damaged four transorts, two cruisers and a destroyr.

(The Italian communique said ve other Allied merchantmen ere hit by Axis aircraft in a raid n the harbor of Valletta, Mala.)

American armored forces and ıfantry were snapping at the eels of the demoralized remnants f the Italian army.

The latest town officially reportd to have fallen into the hands Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton. .'s troops was Termini, 20 miles the east of Palermo, but the dvance guard of the American rces was believed to be well to ie east of that point.

The American advance resulted the capture of 7,000 additional alian troops, swelling the total prisoners thus far taken in the icilian campaign to 70,000, of hich 56,000 have been taken by nited States forces.

There was little of the heavy ghting yesterday such as that hich marked the early days of ie campaign and it was apparent iat the Axis forces under Nazi ield Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselng were making frantic preparaons for the general Allied asult which appears imminent.

Kesselring, it was believed, had ree and a half German divisions ailable for the defense of the essina triangle.

Whether these German troops uld expect any assistance from ie Italians remaining in Sicily as problematical.

Hammering ground communicaons, Boston and Mitchell planes t objectives at Adrano, Paterno, ocosia and Cape Orlando in ortheastern Sicily, and Bostons id Baltimores pounded Regalbu-, one of the key points of the xis line in central Sicily.

Harbors along the northeast oast, including, Messina and Barcellona, were swept by gunire and bombs to break up or low Axis reinforcement atempts. Railway sidings, military buildings and barges were ttacked at Sarragata.

The presence of Axis troop-carring airplanes, barges and merchantmen was taken as indisputble evidence that reinforcements ill are arriving without regard the cost in men and machines.

BULLETIN

MOSCOW —(AP)— Rain came o the aid of desperately reisting Germans in the Orel ector and slowed down somehat the powerful Russian adance, although intensive batles continued, the Russian army ewspaper Red Star reported oday.

MOSCOW—(U.P.)—The Red army s immobilized the last German ain supply and reinforcement ad to Orel, Nazi south-central ont bastion, and breached Axis fenses 16 miles south of the city, ont dispatches said today.

Secondary lines of communicaon with Orel still remain in Gerın hands, but are not believed pable of handling the supplies quired by the 250,000 Germans fending the Orel pocket.

The new successes were reorted in twin drives south of rel, where main Russian pressre was shifted after coordinatd advances from the north and ast placed other Soviet forces lmost on the outskirts of the ity, held by the Germans since 941.

Once the main outer defenses uth of Orel have been pierced, it expected that the Russians will unch an all-out assault from all ree directions to capture the city.

planation why heavier planes were not used.

The navy communique also reported on the Wake island raid Saturday by army Liberator heavy bombers. Damage to the Japanese-held island in the central Pacific was considerable. The raid destroyed nine fighters of 30 which attempted to intercept. Four other Zeros were listed as probably destroyed, five others were damaged.

The flight of Liberators was intercepted by a group of 30 Zero fighters. Of those nine were shot down, four were probably shot down and five were damaged, Knox told his press conference.

One American plane is listed as missing.

The Pacific island had been raided half a dozen times before.

As for an estimate of damage on the latest attack, the navy secretary said simply that "we hit the island promiscuously and generally."

The Berlin radio said yesterday the raid had been made, attributing the report to a Tokyo dispatch.

Yank Start All-Out Push For Munda

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Southwest Pacific —(U.P.)— American forces in an all-out tank-led assault on Munda are advancing against a death stand by the reinforced Japanese garrison, field dispatches reported today.

Beginning the all-out push Sunday with aid of planes and warships that poured 286 tons of steel and explosives into the enemy stronghold, the U. S. jungle fighters slashed forward for advances ranging up to 500 yards.

But the Japanese put up a stubborn defense and a dispatch from South Pacific headquarters said all indications were the entire garrison would die rather than surrender. A spokesman was quoted as saying the garrison probably had been reinforced but not to a great extent.

The spokesman also warned against hopes of an early capture of Munda because of the desperate resistance but said the U. S. troops probably had moved out of the muddy jungle and reached the cocoanut plantation fringing the Japanese airfield.

Jap Policy Unchanged By Italy Shake-up

(By Associated Press)

Domei, Japanese news agency, in a broadcast by the Tokyo radio, said that Foreign Minister Mamoru Shigemitsu told the Japanese cabinet today that Japan's war policy will remain completely unchanged despite any new developments which may follow the resignation of Benito Mussolini.

The broadcast was recorded by the Associated Press.

Meanwhile, according to Domei, political quarters in Tokyo expressed belief that developments in Italy would in no way affect Japan's situation.

TRANSIT MEN ACCEPT RAISE

Agree to Three and Half Cent Pay Boost at Cleveland.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—AFL street car and bus operators, whose strikes in recent months twice tied up Cleveland's mass transportation system, have voted to accept a 3½ cent hourly pay increase granted all city transit system employes nearly two months ago, President Thomas P. Meany of the union announced today.

The union originally asked raises of 14½ to 17½ cents hourly, then lowered its demand to 10½ cents an hour. Under the present rate schedule, including the 3½ cent raise, operators on two-man street cars receive 94 cents hourly, and bus and one-man car operators are paid $1.01 an hour.

He said then, however, that only one lane will be used for a time so that workmen can complete crossovers between the lanes and cement steps approaching homes along the improvement.

Lombardo Brothers Construction company, contractor on the job, last fall obtained an indefinite extension of time for completing the work, contending that inability to obtain materials and labor made it impossible to complete the job on time. Reveal Churchill Foresaw Duce's Fall

WASHINGTON —(AP)— A two-months-old prediction by Winston Churchill — voiced behind the closed doors of the senate foreign relations committee—that Mussolini's regime would colalpse fostered a belief in congressional circles today that the United Nations are fully prepared for any peace bid that may come from Italy.

Senator Van Nuys (D-Ind) told an interviewer the British prime Minister flatly forecast the collapse of the Mussolini government after he had addressed congress May 19.

Senator Burton (R-Ohio) saw in the successful Sicilian campaign and the deposing of Mussolini a vindication of what he termed the Allied policy of "overwhelming attack. In that the enemy gives up before both sides suffer large casualties."

Members of congress appeared to be in general accord that the Italians would have to surrender unconditionally, giving the United Nations access to their mainland military facilities, if they want peace now.

OWI Calls Italian King 'Little Moron'

NEW YORK —(AP)— The Office of War Information, in shortwave broadcasts beamed to Italy and the rest of Europe, yesterday carried statements characterizing King Victor Emmanuel as "the moronic little king" and branding both the king and Marshal Pietro Badoglio as "Fascists."

The reference to "the moronic little king" was carried in an English language broadcast at 2 p. m, when the OWI quoted extensively from a Sunday-night radio speech by Samuel Grafton, columnist for the New York Post. It was Grafton who described Emmanuel "the moronic little king." The reference was dropped from the 3 p. m. broadcast.

"Fascism is still in power in Italy," the broadcast quoted Grafton. "It has put on a new face, that is all.

END RIOTING

Yanks Give Nazi Food To the People of Palermo.

PALERMO, Sicily, July 23 — (Delayed)—Food rioting broke out on Palermo streets today, but American troops brought it under control by distributing captured German military stores.

The disorder centered around the railroad station, where a mob of hungry people, many of whom hadn't eaten for days, descended on a German supply dump. Railroad authorities appealed for help to Capt Raymond W. Robowski of Minneapolis, who was commanding a road patrol.

The American officer said he persuaded railroad authorities to let him dole out the supplies. Robowski said some women carried in their arms babies "so starved there was hardly any life left in them at all."

CHAPTER

Meegan sat alone at the table in the club house and saw Toby advance across the dining room to Erica. Erica looked when Toby spoke to her as though she was certain Toby had made a mistake. At any rate she did not refuse him and they arose and danced. They danced well together, Toby talking and smiling, 'turning on' his charm as he did even for the stout old ladies with whom he occasionally danced. Erica continued to look as though she was certain he had made a mistake. When the music stopped, Meegan saw Toby and Erica go out, Toby opening a fresh pack of cigarets as he went.

Meegan kept her eyes on the door. She did not know how long she waited for them to return, but when she saw Toby again, Erica wasn't with him and Toby had his handkerchief pressed to his face as he walked hurriedly toward her.

"That damned little—" he said.

As the handkerchief slipped a trifle, she saw that his face was red. Obviously Erica had slapped him hard.

"I'm going to get a drink," he said sourly, "and any more alley cats you pick up in the future you can keep to yourself."

Meegan said, her face troubled, "Oh, Toby, why did you spoil it for her? You're bestial when you drink. I'm ashamed of you." She was afraid she was going to cry and crying was a luxury she denied herself. One fine day when everything in her life was straightened out and all the bills were paid she would indulge in a good long cry.

Toby walked away, pretending that there was something in his eye.

And it was because she saw Fayne coming toward her and she was too troubled to speak to him that she arose and went out, trying to seem that it was only a breath of air she wanted as she passed people and spoke to them. The coolness was good, she thought, as she walked down to the beach and there found Erica crying, not as one angry, but as one hurt.

Meegan did not hesitate. Sitting beside her, she said. "I'm terribly sorry. Toby has had too much to drink. That isn't an excuse but it is an explanation."

Erica took her hands from her face and looked at her. And Meegan thought that while now Erica's face was pretty with youth, later it would be a face of character. Unlike Clare, everything that had happened or would happen to Erica would be marked in her strong, sullen, sultry face.

"I hate this place," she said.

"Then why don't you go home?"

"I haven't any home," her voice was hoarse. Her anger, the sudden fury that had caused her to strike Toby, was gone. Her mouth was soft and as red as her frock and determined. "They don't snub us. They ignore us and . . . and that's worse. They look through us as if we aren't there. I always think they are laughing at us. We can't go back where we came from and we don't belong here. We don't belong anywhere. That's what's happened to us."

"Perhaps you'll be surprised to know that is exactly what has happened to me. But go on . . . Tell me. You'll feel better.."

Erica said, "All right, I'll tell you. We were poor until Roy sold his invention. He was a machinist's helper, but he was always going down to the shop to experiment. His invention is something that has speeded up defense and he sold it to the president of the company."

"I see," Meegan said. "Now you want to belong here."

"Not in the way you think. Not by showing off the way Helen does. I try to understand how she feels. She wants the best for me and the children. She's been so good to me since my mother and father died. She is good. She saved the money to send me to business school. I had a job at the factory, in the office, and I was taking courses at Hopkins at night. Roy doesn't like it here. He isn't comfortable but he's enduring it because he thinks it makes Helen and the children and me happy to be here. I don't know where we'll go from here. Probably to some place in town where we don't belong either."

Meegan said, "It's funny the different things war does to people. Perhaps if they had not desperately needed time-saving devices, Roy's invention would never have been noticed. In a way, Erica, you're like the people in the conquered countries who've been bombed out of their homes. You have the same feeling of not having any place to go. Nothing you see or touch is familiar to you."

"Yes, that's it. That's exactly how I feel. I couldn't explain it. I thought it was going to be a wonderful summer here. There isn't any ugliness here and the people aren't too busy to know they're . . . well, they're alive. You don't understand any of this. You've always had it. We never lived before. We just worked and ate and slept. Leisure was a word we skipped over when we read because we didn't know what it meant and if we had, we'd have known it wasn't for us. You saw flowers at the market at Easter but you never grew them or cut them yourself . . . The clock was your dictator and your enemy. You couldn't sleep when you were tired and wake up when you were rested. The clock told you what to do. To be able to grow your own flowers and not live by the clock . . . those things make money good to have."

"You don't hate it here then because there is beauty in living here?"

"Yes. But we don't belong. Your brother made me feel cheap . . . like a girl he'd picked up. He isn't as much of a gentleman as the men I've worked with . . . I've got to go back in. Helen won't know what's happened to me. She knows I don't know anybody."

"You know me."

"Yes, I know you now." Rising brushing the sand from her frock, she said, "I like you now. I guess I haven't been very nice to you. Helen said I was rude. But we don't talk the same language."

"We've probably read the same books."

She looked at Meegan. "Probably we have but we wouldn't agree on them. I know, for instance, that we'd be on different sides on the Spanish war . . . Aren't you going in?"

Meegan nodded and they walked back together to the veranda.

As they went inside, Erica said, "I'm not sorry I slapped him. I'd do it again."

Meegan said, "I'm sure you would and I'd have probably done the same. But about the Spanish revolution, we are on the same side. I have very definite opinions about that."

It was the first time she had heard Erica laugh, a short, quick, hearty spurt of young laughter. Then Erica went to the table where Helen and Roy were looking anxious and Meegan went to her table where her party had assembled again. Toby's face had returned to its normal healthy tan. Clare was looking tired, her eyes less clear, her skin less glowing. Fayne was looking at his watch.

"It's almost twelve," he said to Clare.

"Oh, is it? Oh, yes . . ."

"You're not leaving?" Toby asked.

Fayne said with a pleasant detachment, "Yes, sorry, but we must."

"But so early!" one of the women protested.

Fayne glanced quickly at Clare. "You'll always find us at home by twelve."

In a tone of irritation Clare said, "Oh, very well, let's go. It's tiresome but . . . I shall see you tomorrow. All of you. Come to our place for a swim and cocktails." To Meegan she said, "Good night, darling," and touched her shoulder briefly.

Meegan and Toby left at one after Toby had made several visits to the bar and Meegan had danced with several young men who had arrived late from weekend leaves from Fort Meade.

Toby was driving home when he said, "I can't get over that damned girl taking a poke at me. Such finesse!"

"I like her . . ."

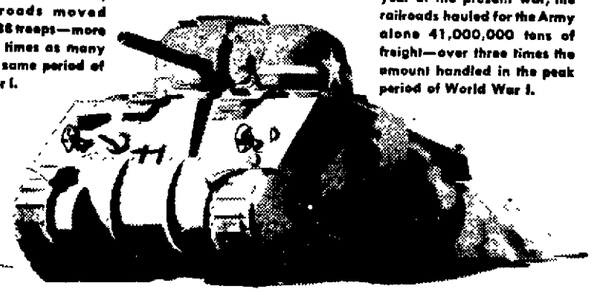
IT'S A MUCH Bigger Job THAN IN 1917

WORLD WAR I

Troops. In the first 12 months of the last war, the railroads moved 2,734,527 troops, including inductees.

Supplies. Between July 1918 and June 1919—peak period for freight movement of the last war, and immediately thereafter—the railroads handled 11,224,427 tons of Army freight.

WORLD WAR II

Troops. In the first 12 months of this war, the railroads moved 11,641,838 troops—more than four times as many as in the same period of World War I.


Supplies. During the first year of the present war, the railroads hauled for the Army alone 41,000,000 tons of freight—over three times the amount handled in the peak period of World War I.

Offhand, how much equipment do you suppose it took to move those 11,641,838 troops?

21,000 special trains!

Thousands of passenger cars . . . thousands of freight cars . . . thousands of locomotives—equipment of all kinds.

Any wonder, then, why you may find it difficult to procure a berth or seat for an essential trip . . . or be obliged to wait for a place in the dining car?

With the equipment available for civilian travel, the railroads are doing their best to accommodate the public.

By abstaining from unnecessary travel . . . scheduling trips for Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday, when traffic is not quite so heavy . . . promptly cancelling a Pullman reservation you cannot use . . . taking aboard as little luggage as possible—you are helping to make available equipment serve the greatest number of persons, and the Pennsylvania Railroad—as well as others—deeply appreciates this cooperation.

Police Officers Make a Pledge

A RESOLUTION adopted by the Fraternal Order of Police of Ohio, at its convention in Cincinnati last week, recognizes the problem of increased juvenile delinquency "to be of such magnitude and scope as to challenge and require the common and united efforts of all good citizens, to the end that a satisfactory solution will be found and an efficient remedy applied."

The resolution quoted from a recent statement by J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the federal bureau of investigation: "This country is in deadly peril . . . I am not easily shocked nor easily alarmed, but today, like thousands of others, I am both shocked and alarmed. The arrests of teen-age boys and girls, all over the country, are staggering. Some of the crimes the youngsters are committing are almost unspeakable. If we are to correct it we must face it."

Ohio police officers proclaimed intention to devote their time, talents and energies to the task of minimizing the commission of crimes by children.

Police officers in their respective cities are probably the best informed of any group of citizens as to the breeding places of juvenile delinquency and adult misbehavior, and, if not restrained by administrative policies of tolerance toward law violators, will be in position to give effective co-operation to the present effort to improve the environment of teen-age children.

Wallace's Overshadowed Speech

VICE PRESIDENT WALLACE was placed at considerable disadvantage Sunday afternoon in having public attention distracted from his "important" speech in Detroit by the announcement of Mussolini's overthrow coming immediately afterward.

It is said of Mr. Wallace that "he lives and moves in a world of ideals" and his Sunday afternoon speech was typical of his utter disregard of obstacles that stand in the way of quickly transforming this into the "perfect world" of which he has evolved a beautiful mental picture.

Whatever may be thought of Mr. Wallace, or of his failures as an administrator, he must be admired for his idealism, as the world which he pictures would be nothing less than a return to the Garden of Eden—with all modern conveniences.

And all that would be needed in the accomplishment would be to re-discover Aladdin's magic lamp, as told about in Arabian Nights, and place it at the disposal of Mr. Wallace and others of the New Deal crew, so that they would be enabled to change human nature, control farm production, equalize ability, produce the requirements for luxurious living without expenditure of mental or physical effort, and grind out billions of dollars without imposing a burden on taxpayers.

The only trouble is that most grownups think the story of Aladdin's lamp is fiction—but, who knows, maybe Harry Hopkins has it stuck away around the White House somewhere.

Air Power Gaining In Pacific

THIS IS TRULY the Age of Flying, and America is not only its inventor but its prophet. The fact appears on every battlefield in the world. It is an old theme now, but with ever-spreading applications.

Sicily and Rome are the most obvious examples at the moment, but if they were not so vivid in the current news the fact would be shown with startling clarity in the Pacific war. Warships, of course, have given good account of themselves, but the amazing triumphs of MacArthur's forces over the Japanese navy have been mainly accomplished by the bold use of air power. And when the time comes to close in on Japan and beat her down, it will be under an almost solid cover of fighting and bombing planes.

In Europe it is expected by experts that there will be a big job of ground slugging, more or less like the old method and the procedure of Russia on the eastern front in this war. Yet with American air power already surpassing that of all the other fighting nations, and steadily growing, it is sure to play a big part—possibly the decisive part—in the final European Armageddon.

Lions Anxious To Do More

HAVING just concluded an international convention in Cleveland, there is division of opinion among Lions clubs as to whether any more such meetings should be held until after the war.

There is no uncertainty, however, about the feeling of members as to the inspiration and help received by attendance at the Cleveland convention. They were all anxious to go back to do even more and better work in their own communities.

One of their important activities is sight conservation. Everywhere they urge better care of children's eyes. They explain to children themselves, they talk to parents and to schools. In many cases of need, they provide glasses.

Hobby rooms to prevent juvenile delinquency are another of their services. In Seattle, one hobby room alone gives opportunity for games and tools to more than a thousand children a year.

No Check On Inflation

FROM no less respected an authority than Bernard Baruch comes the following interesting commentary on the prevention of inflation:

"I hope I shall not be understood as being opposed to the excess profits tax. The war policy advocated by me could not be effectuated without it. . . . Excess profits taxes—standing alone—have no effect whatever to check inflation. Their only effect is to increase it."

The people of this country should realize that the insidious threat of inflation cannot be passed off merely by increasing excess profits taxes. Industry agrees to the payment of excess profits tax and has said so many times. But it is a serious error to consider that the whole complex problem can be solved in that way.

It is estimated that the war is costing about $2 a day for each person in the United States—so let's get it over with as soon as possible.

History continues to repeat itself in places with unpronounceable names.

THEY'RE STILL USING "MAKE-BELIEVE" WEAPONS

Japs May Believe Secret Coup Will Knock Out Enemy Fleets

By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Japanese production of airplanes is about 700 a month. This information comes from the Chinese Intelligence, which incidentally has proved just about the most accurate of any sources about what is going on in Japan. Unfortunately we do not have as accurate information about Germany as the wily Chinese seem able to get from their hated neighbor.

For instance, as long ago as when Wendell Willkie was in the Far East the Chinese Intelligence knew that the weak spot of the Japanese was merchant shipping, and partly as a result of that information our submarines have been going to town on Jap freighters and transports ever since.

But the really interesting point about this seven hundred planes a month is that we are now making 8,500 a month, and will soon reach, we hope, barring strikes, 10,000 a month.

The British production is large, and is of course in addition to ours.

The Russians make good planes, some of them, it is reported, as good as our best, but leave the Soviet production out of the picture for a moment. Russia is not at war with Japan, and has made no promises as to what she will do about the Far East after Germany is beaten.

BRITAIN has mede the promise to fight Japan until the Nipponese are conquered. The promise was made by Winston Churchill, but there had never been any doubt about it before that. It is not a question of British good faith, which entered into the situation with Churchill's promise. It is a question of Britain's selfish interests. After all Britain has "lost face" terribly in the Far East as a result of Hongkong, Singapore, Burma, and the sinking of her two crack ships by Jap torpedo planes.

She MUST help to beat Japan to her knees—would probably go on fighting Japan on her own account even if she did not have such a powerful ally as the United States to aid her. And incidentally she is ready to move her Mediterranean fleet to the Pacific the moment the Italian fleet is accounted for.

Now put this picture, our plane production more than ten times that of Japan, with Britain bringing the odds much higher, in contrast with the curious and hard-to-understand Japanese strategy on ships and planes in the Southwest Pacific. Up to now they seem to be willing to trade punches.

EXCEPT for their newer battleships which apparently they have not risked at all, they are acting on the attrition policy made famous by General U. S. Grant, that if he lost a thousand men in a battle and the Confederates lost 500 it was a Union gain, because he could replace the thousand men and the Confederates could not.

Actually the best information is that the positive statements of the navy and army that we are losing far fewer planes than the Japanese in these fights, and the same statement with regard to ships, are correct.

What our naval experts fail utterly to understand is why the Japanese so many times in this war have "sent a boy to do a man's work." Why, in other words, they have not made a few real punches, with plenty of fire power, including some of their big battleships, instead of literally scores of petty attacks, most of which have cost them dearly. Since the battle of the Java Sea the Japs have really scored only once, when they caught three of our cruisers and one Australian off base.

Our navy would be delighted if they did just that, because our admirals are quite sure now that if the Japanese came down toward the Solomons in real naval strength, ready to fight, that the result would be a disastrous Japanese defeat, one that would shorten the war considerably.

"It could be," said one admiral, "that the Japs think they have another trick as good as attacking before the declaration of war—a trick that will work only once. So they may be waiting until the British fleet is in the Pacific, too figuring on destroying the naval strength of both Britain and the U. S. in that one coup.

"But I think this time they will be disappointed."

No news since the Armistice of 1918 caused more cheers around the world than the news that Benito Mussolini, who had annoyed the planet for 21 years as a triple-threat radio orator, had quit.

* * *

If it is all on the level, it is the greatest news our side has had since the outbreak of the war. The king called on all Italians to keep up the war, but it sounded a lot like Florentine double talk.

* * *

King Emmanuel and Marshal Badoglio know which side Italy's bread is buttered on and the thing to bear in mind is that bellowing Benito has turned in his butter knife.

* * *

This takes one partner out of the firm of Hitler, Tojo and Mussolini, but with the use of mirrors the two survivors can still establish a quorum. Maybe Benito wasn't a great tower of strength but no corporation likes to lose partners in tough going.

On July 19 we told you "Mussolini's balcony is beginning to wobble."

Timely Editorial

Enlightened Progress.

Enlightenment is spreading. Slowly it is enacted into law. There are now 30 states which require medical examinations before marriage licenses are issued. Missouri, Nebraska, Idaho, and Wyoming passed such measures this year. In these 30 states containing 70 per cent of the nation's population, sane steps are taken to prevent the spread of venereal diseases. In those states, unborn children are protected against the menace of syphilis. In 21 states both premarriage and prenatal examinations are legal requirements.

There is one line of human progress which is encouraging. The alignment of the remaining 18 should come more rapidly following the pioneer work done in the 30.—Toledo Blade.

Suggests British Withdraw From Political Phase of War on Italy

WASHINGTON—Herewith is a suggestion to the leaders of American citizens of Italian descent by which this columnist believes we can save the lives of American boys, British boys, and Italian boys. If I were Mayor LaGuardia, Mayor Rossi of San Francisco, Judge Pecora of New York or Congressman D'Alesandro of Baltimore I would make an appeal to Prime Minister Churchill along the following lines:

To the Prime Minister of England:

We Americans of Italian descent respectfully submit a proposal which we believe will save the lives of British and American boys now fighting in Italy. We also believe it will take Italy more quickly out of a war which she never should have entered and which the bulk of the Italian people hate and deplore.

Our proposal is meant as no reflection upon your great leadership, without which the British Empire and its allies would not be where they are today. To anyone less broad-gauged in mind and vision hesitate to make this suggestion.

However, we believe that if the British government withdrew from all direction of political policy toward Italy, leaving all political phases of the war entirely in the hands of President Roosevelt, then our former countrymen would much more quickly surrender to the president of the United States.

Italian-American Ties.

WE RESPECTFULLY submit this, first, because the United States has great ties with Italy. Many of her former sons live here. New York City alone has a greater Italian population than Rome. Millions of our Italian relatives in Italy have confidence, trust and love for the United States. They look to this country as their second home.

Unfortunately this is not true of relatives between Italy and England.

Unfortunately Italy and England have shared a certain degree of rivalry in the Mediterranean. This rivalry is no basic obstacle to future friendship and never worried us until fanned into flame by an insatiable dictator. But his poison, dropped year after year into the veins of the Italian people for two decades, cannot be extracted overnight.

Thus it remains an unfortunate fact that many Italians wrongly suspect England of territorial ambitions and fear that not merely the Italian islands but even the mainland of Italy will continue under British rule.

President Roosevelt, they know, has no territorial ambitions. They know that every American boy wants only to win the war quickly and get home. They know that with America alone guiding immediate political destinies, Italy would be nursed back to sound democratic government, with no fear of a conqueror's heel indefinitely on her neck.

Taught to Hate Britain.

WE IN the United States who know you, Mr. Prime Minister, do not for one minute believe that England has any territorial ambitions at the expense of Italy. But the Italian people do not know you. They have been taught to fear and hate you. And it is they whom we must persuade to surrender.

Furthermore, your eloquence is more effective than you realize. Your speech addressed to Italy before Mussolini dragged his helpless people into the war, is well remembered. You warned that there was no reason why Italy and England could not live in peace despite Hitler, but that if Italy did enter the war, Britain would tear the Italian Empire to pieces.

You were absolutely right in issuing that warning. But today, skillful propsganda artists are recalling your speech, waving it before the frightened eyes of Italians, warning them of the terrible fate awaiting them if they surrender.

Another of your speeches used by glib-tongued propagandists is the one you made about holding the carrot before the donkey and prodding the donkey with the stick. This was a graphic figure of speech, but it had one drawback. The Fascist radio every night remended the Italian people that you are planning to treat them as donkeys.

"You are a nation which produced Christopher Columbus," screams the Rome Radio. "You produced Amerigo Vespucci and Michelangelo. Yet Mr. Churchill calls you a donkey. That is the fate in store for every Italian who weakens. You will lead the life of the donkey."

Another thing which worries us is the new Allied military government created for Sicily. We note that the British representative on that commission is Maj. Gen. Lord Rennell of Rodd, former manager of the Bank of International Settlements in Basle. Italians distrust international bankers. Also, though you may not know it, a resolution is now before the U. S. congress to investigate the Bank of International Settlements.

Military Commissions.

BUT REGARDLESS of Lord Rennell, we do not believe any Britisher should be on the governing commission which takes over Sicily and Italy. They would be excellent advisers. They could cooperate from the sidelines. But we believe the Italian people will co-operate more wholeheartedly and surrender more quickly if these governing commissions are 100% American.

You know, of course, that there are some people who believe you dominate Mr. Roosevelt's views when it comes to British-American policy. We do not concur in that. But we do suggest that for the time being, Allied policy toward Italy be directed solely by President Roosevelt.

In this case, we are convinced that British as well as American lives will be saved, the war will be shortened, and Italy much sooner will take her place on the side of the Allies under a truly democratic form of government.

ERNIE PYLE — Roving Reporter

No Feeling of Fear As Invasion Fleet Moved Through Peaceful Mediterranean.

WITH THE U. S. NAVY IN THE MEDITERRANEAN—(By Wireless—Delayed)—Our first day at sea on the way to invade Sicily was truly like a peacetime Mediterranean cruise. The weather was something you read about, gently warm and sunny and the sea as smooth as velvet.

We were kept at a sharp alert for at any moment we could be attacked by a submarine, surface ship or airplane and yet any kind of an attack—even the fact that anybody would want to attack anybody else—was so utterly out of keeping with the benignity of the sea that it was hard to take seriously the possibility of danger.

I had thought I might be afraid at sea, sailing in this great fleet that by its very presence was justification for attack, and yet I found it impossible to be afraid. As we sailed along I couldn't help but think of a paragraph of one of Joseph Conrad's sea stories I had read just a few days before. It so perfectly expresesd our feeling about the changeless sea that I'm going to quote it here.

It was in a story called "The Tale," written about the last war. In it Conrad said:

"What at first used to amaze the commanding officer was the unchanged face of the waters, with its familiar expression, neither more friendly nor more hostile. On fine days the sun would strike sparks upon the blue; here and there a peaceful smudge of smoke hangs in the distance, and it is impossible to believe that the familiar clear horizon traces the limit of one great circular ambush. One envies the soldiers at the end of the day, wiping the sweat and blood from their faces, counting the dead and fallen to their hands, looking at the devastated field, the torn earth that seems to suffer and bleed with them. One does, really. The final brutality of it—the taste of primitive passion—the ferocious frankness of the blow struck with one's hand—the direct call and the straight response. Well, the sea gives you nothing of that, and seems to pretend that there was nothing the matter with the world."

And that's the way it was with us; and it had never occurred to me before that that might be the way in enemy waters during wartime. Why it remained that way we shall never know but throughout our long voyage and right up to the final dropping anchor we never had one single attack from above, from below, nor from over the horizon.

DUSK brought a change. Not feeling fear at all but somehow an acute sense of the drama we were playing at that moment on the face of the sea that has known such a major share of the world's great warfare. In the faint light of the dusk, forms became indistinguishable. Nearby ships were only heavier spots against the heavy background of the night. Now you thought you saw something and now there was nothing. The gigantic armada was on all sides of us, there only in knowledge.

Then out of nowhere, a roiling little subchaser took on a dim shape alongside us and with its motors held itself steady about 30 yards away. You could not see the speaker but a megaphoned voice came loudly across the water telling us of the motor breakdown of one of the troop-carrying barges farther back.

We megaphoned advice over to him. His response came back. Out in the darkness the voice was young. You could picture a boyish skipper over there in his blown hair and his life jacket and binoculars, rolling to the sea in the Mediterranean dusk.

• Some young man who had so recently been so normally unaware of any sea at all — the bookkeeper in your bank, perhaps, and now here he was a strange new man in command of a ship, suddenly transformed into a person with waful responsibilities carrying out with great intentness his special small part of the enormous aggregate that is our war on all the lands and seas of the globe.

In his unnatural presence there in the rolling darkness of the Mediterranean you realized vividly how everybody in America has changed, however life suddenly stopped and suddenly began again on a different course. Everything in this world has stopped except war and we are all men of new professions out in some strange night caring for each other.

THAT'S the way you felt as you heard this kid, this pleasant kid, bawling across the dark waters strange nautical words with disciplined deliberation that carried in them the very strength of the sea itself, the strong matured words of the Captain of his own ship, saying, "Aye, aye, sir. If there is any change I will use my own judgment and report to you again at dawn. Goodnight, sir."

Then the whole darkness enveloped the American armada. Not a pinpoint of light showed from those hundreds of ships as they surged on through the night toward their destiny, carrying across this ageless and indifferent sea tens of thousands of young men of new professions, fighting for . . . for . . . well, at least for each other.

Farmer's Diary

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

THE FAMILY FARM.

I SAW a grimy city dweller walk to his home on a side street. He was no more than 40. Two husky children ran along to meet him—the boy was ten, the girl six, perhaps. His wife was preparing dinner for the family. The house was small and neat, with clumps of petunias flowering at the corners of the porch.

Two hours later, I passed by again. On a vacant lot, at the rear, the whole family was busy hoeing and pulling weeds. The rows of vegetables looked so green and thrifty—two rows of beets, two of carrots, a patch of tasseled sweet-corn—that I walked over to get a closer view.

"Your victory garden is a success," I said.

"Yes," the man answered, "As soon as we can afford it, we're going to sell this place and buy a little farm—not more'n 10 acres of good land—where we can have our home and raise our own living. There are about 10 families around here that want to do the same thing.

"On a small farm we could have a pig or two, some chickens, a cow, and plenty of room for the kids. I could still work in town, and the wife and children could do a lot of the farming. They'd like it and it'd be good for them. Why, I could drive even 15 miles in a half hour and that wouldn't be much to pay for the privilege of living on your own land."

"THE family farm is one of the most ideal units of Americanism," says Wheeler McMillan, editor of Farm Journal. "Here children become an asset. They will help produce the food for the home, learn the lessons of growth, the mysteries of the soil, the joy of wild life all about."

It would seem that in all the great advances of scientific research, and modern invention, the basic lowly soil that all the world must feed upon has been strangely neglected. Given the right chemical balance of the soil and fruits that grow from it will mean health—will eliminate most of the physical illnesses of the human race. Discovery of possibilities in the soil is like pioneer trails across a new continent. It will add much to the peace and happiness of all the world.
